

Survey shows slack TF child support payments

By BILL LAZARUS

Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Only about one third of court-ordered child-support payments in Twin Falls County are being paid, a Times-News survey shows.

A survey of 100 case records of persons awarded child support shows that only 38 of the 100 receive their full payment for the support of their children.

In 53 of the 100 cases there are no payments made at all, or payments had been dropped within a few months.

Eleven of the 100 cases involved women receiving only a fraction of the court-awarded payments.

Child support payments are often ordered in court to provide for the support of a dependent child. In most cases the husband pays his divorced wife to provide for the child's support, providing the child lives with the mother.

There are about 800 cases in Twin Falls County in which child support payments have been ordered. Each case involves support for one or more children.

The number of complaints lodged against the negligent fathers indicates the magnitude of the problem.

Three large file cabinets in the Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney's office house about 1,900 case records of non-payment of child support during the past five years.

Beth Reddick, who alone handles child support problems directed to the prosecuting attorney, estimated that 800 of the cases are "active," meaning that problems with payment continue to exist. About half the phone calls coming to the prosecutor's office concern child support, she added.

Despite the size of the problem, very few men have been punished for not paying.

Twin Falls County Pros. Atty. Robert Galley said that during the past two years only six or seven have been found guilty of being in contempt of court for non-payment of child support.

With one exception, none of these men served the full 30-day jail sentence, but instead were granted work releases when they promised to start paying support.

Failure to pay support is a felony punishable by a maximum 14-year jail sentence.

In the past year criminal charges were brought against seven men. Just one man was convicted and sentenced to five years imprisonment for not paying support. However, in lieu of the sentence he was given three months probation and told to start paying, Galley said.

"It's a bastard case," one judge, who handles child support cases, said.

The judge asked not to be identified. He said that, unlike any other law, if a man is found guilty of a felony in a child support case, he is given an opportunity to start paying before being sentenced to serve time.

"Nobody has been put in prison for a long time, basically because what you're trying to do is get some money from the guy," the judge said.

Phase IV prices set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The price freeze ends, and Phase IV begins, at midnight Sunday for most of the economy — almost two years to the day after President Nixon began his "temporary" experiment with wage-price controls.

Starting Monday, prices for most all goods and services — except beef and petroleum products — are free to rise within a range laid out under a complex framework of rules administered by the Cost of Living Council (CLC).

However, since the biggest corporations will have to give 30 days advance notice to the government before boosting prices, consumers won't be feeling the weight of some price boosts until mid-September.

Phase IV rules also require businessmen to cut prices under certain conditions, but reductions are likely to be rare.

Instead, administration economic controllers are warning shoppers to brace for a new inflationary surge as companies race to markup prices that were held in check during the two-month freeze.

The freeze is being thawed gradually in order to prevent a sudden price explosion and give the economy time to absorb the higher prices that the government concedes are on the way.

Thus, food prices, except beef, were unfrozen July 13. The freeze will be lifted on most other prices at 11:59 p.m. EDT Sunday. However, gasoline, home heating oil and other petroleum products will remain covered an extra week, until Aug. 19, and beef will remain under price ceiling until Sept. 12.

The standard for wage increases remains the same as before: 5.5 per cent a year for wages and 0.2 per cent for fringe benefits.

Israelis fail to catch guerrillas

By United Press International

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Saturday that Israel diverted a Baghdad-bound Arab airliner to one of its airbases in an effort to capture leaders of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) guerrilla group.

Dayan said the PFLP leader, Dr. George Habash, was "the master of murderers" and that his group was behind the attack on passengers at Athens airport last Sunday and the hijacking of a Japan Air Lines plane to Libya last month.

"Therefore, we wanted to put this to a stop and to fight this organization with all the means we have," Dayan said.

Four Arab guerrilla leaders, including Habash and an aide, Salah Salah, were to be on the airliner intercepted by Israeli warplanes, guerrilla sources said. But the four decided not to make the flight because they smelled "something fishy," a PFLP spokesman in Beirut said Saturday.

"We fooled them this time," a representative of the PFLP said.

Meanwhile, a U.N. Security Council session was tentatively scheduled for Monday at the request of Lebanon as threats and expressions of outrage poured in from Arab lands.

"He is the master of murderers, George Habash, absolutely without restraint," Dayan said.

"Any country, any group of people, children, it makes no difference, whatever he can later contend had some connection with Israel."

The PFLP also engineered the simultaneous hijacking of three planes to Jordan three years ago. The craft were blown up after the passengers allowed to flee.

Although no guerrillas were found by Israel in Friday's action, Dayan, speaking in an interview on Israeli television, said, "To my mind this operation did not fail. Had last night's action gotten complicated and some civilians gotten injured, then I would say we had a failure and there are failures in war."

"Or had we caught the wrong plane...but the plane was the same plane we were looking for and there were no errors that led to the harming of life or anything else."

Beef shortage affects slaughterhouse workers

By United Press International

The lack of beef on the market has forced the closings of many meat related industries and more will probably shut down before the price ceiling is lifted Sept. 12.

A total of 24 slaughterhouses had closed in Los Angeles by Saturday. J.J. Rodriguez of the Butchers Union Local 563 said more than 2,000 persons have been put out of work by the closings and they expect to remain unemployed until Sept. 12.

"They just have to wait and see if they can find a job somewhere," Rodriguez said. "Even a month is a long time for a man to be without a paycheck."

Wadco Foods, Inc., of Estherville, Iowa, had planned to reopen its plant Monday after being closed for repairs but decided not to because of the beef situation. The plants employs about 350 workers.

Baker Beechnut Inc., of Canajoharie, N.Y., one of the nation's largest producers of prepared baby foods, said it will close for one day Monday because beef is unavailable, corn and prune crops are late and dry weather has affected the harvesting of peas.

Philadelphia's 66 kosher meat markets also plan to close Monday because they say they can not get any meat.

Beef producers are not taking their product to market because they say that since retail and wholesale prices are frozen they will lose money. The Agriculture Department said Friday that beef production for the last week was down 28 per cent from the year before.

The American Meat Institute told President Nixon Friday the Cost of Living Council is withholding information from him on the nation's food supply.

USSR words assail China

MOSCOW (UPI)

The Soviet Union, after months of virtually ignoring China, has suddenly unleashed a furious press campaign against Peking that has Western diplomats here guessing.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see the Soviets come out soon with an assertion that China is no longer a Socialist country," one diplomat commented.

There also is speculation that Moscow may be setting the stage for another world Communist conference that would be called to deal with the problem of China.

The press campaign erupted last Tuesday, with a long article in the Communist party newspaper Pravda that many diplomats assume was written in the party Central Committee.

The article accused Peking of being "hostile to the Socialist world," and of having effected "a complete rupture" from Marxism-Leninism and a "complete deviation from the common policy of Socialist countries."

Since then hardly a day has passed without fresh attacks on the Chinese leadership. Diplomats said Chinese attacks on the Soviet Union also have been increasing in tempo lately.

The Pravda article on Tuesday was written as a commentary on the meeting in the Crimea two weeks ago between Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party, and party leaders from Eastern Europe and Mongolia.

Although China was not even mentioned in the official communiqué on that meeting, the Pravda article made clear that China was a major subject of discussion.

Western diplomats who have been following the press this week have been struck by repeated references to the world Communist conference held here in 1969, and to similar meetings in Moscow in 1960 and 1962.

China was a major topic at the last two of those gatherings. Moscow failed in both instances to get all-out support for its side of the dispute, as Romania and party organizations from several other countries refused to go along. The Romanians won't countenance the idea of a conference now, one Western diplomat said. The Romanians for several years have given support to Peking as a counterweight to Soviet influence over their foreign policy.

Search narrows for crying boy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.

(UPI) — Search planes equipped with sophisticated tracking equipment including infra-red cameras Saturday scoured a rugged mountainous section of Central New Mexico to trace down a small boy's radioed plea for help.

The search for the boy, who has been crying for aid over citizens' band channels since Tuesday, got new impetus early Saturday with a three-hour contact with Albuquerque radio operators Alice King and Army Sgt. W. A. Schmidt. They narrowed the boy's location down to a 40-mile-long area south of the city.

"The contact this morning was definitely the most significant development since we started searching Tuesday," Schmidt said.

Search coordinators, however, have not ruled out the possibility that the distress calls might be a hoax. They are equally concerned that the call for help Tuesday may have been real and that pranksters might now be taking advantage of it.

"We don't know that someone hasn't picked that up and now is leading us on a bit," Civil Air Patrol spokesman T. C. Ashby said. "But of course we can't afford to let that stop us. There very well could be someone out there who really needs the help."

During radio contacts with the boy, he has said his name is Larry and that he is 7-years-old. He also said his father's pickup truck had been involved in an accident and that his father was either dead or injured.

The boy's calls were first heard Tuesday by a woman in California. Since then reports of a crying child have been picked up throughout the south and southwest.

Two Air Force planes carrying infra-red cameras were flown from Omaha, Neb., to photograph the area. CAP and military planes and helicopters flew grid patterns over the area.

Presbyterians plan TF barbecue today

TWIN FALLS — This morning at 11 a.m.

Presbyterians from all over Magic Valley will gather at the city park on Shoshone Street for an area Presbyterian barbecue.

They will conduct their worship service there. Mrs. Neil Cross will lead the singing and Brenda Bonnett will be the accompanist. Rev. Robert Van Nest will conduct the worship service. Chris Van Nest will sing to guitar accompaniment. The speaker will be Rev. John Matthew, the new executive for the Snake River area of the Synod of the Pacific. Matthew will suggest some goals and purposes for the church and then will elicit comments and suggestions from the congregation.

It is expected that there will be members present from the congregations at Twin Falls, Hollister, Jerome, Wendell and the Valley Presbyterian churches.

Following the service there will be a barbecue and potluck dinner. Those attending will bring their own table service and a salad and/or dessert.

Informal wear is encouraged.

Drive starts on monument

WALLACE, Idaho (UPI) — Widows of 20 men who died in the May 2, 1972, Sunshine Mine fire announced Friday the start of a fund-raising drive to get $50,000 for a miner's memorial monument honoring the memory of the 91 men who died in the disaster.

Mrs. Melvin House, Wallace, one of the widows, said the group has commissioned sculptor Kenneth Long, Kellogg, to construct a 12-foot metal statue on a six-foot concrete base.

She said plans call for an "eternal miner's light" in the

Stores charged in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — County Attorney Carl J. Nemelka has charged nine grocery stores with violating health codes by selling hamburger with excessive fat content.

Nemelka filed criminal complaints Friday against four Safeway, three Warshaws, one Albertsons and one Smith's Food King supermarkets, all in the Salt Lake area.

The charges stemmed from an investigation earlier in the month when Nemelka sent undercover agents to supermarkets to buy meat samples. The samples were later analyzed for fat content.

A spokesman for the county attorney's office said the stores were charged with selling hamburger with fat contents in excess of the amount allowed by county health codes and with selling misbranded meat. A conviction could bring penalties of up to six months in jail and a $200 fine.

Spokesmen for Safeway Stores Inc., and for Smith's Management Corp., which owns Smith's Food King and Warshaw Markets, refused to comment on the charges. An Albertson's spokesman said he would have to check with headquarters before saying anything.

Warning given

BORIS (UPI) — Two Idaho Cattlemen's Association officials Friday spoke out against the price freeze on meat and warned shortages will continue while government controls continue.

Robert Henderliser, executive vice president of the association, said current meat shortages could continue through December if government controls are not stopped.

Golden Age club fetes 3.

TWIN FALLS — Elva Olson, Fred and Hattie Craig were honored with cake and ice cream and "good wishes" when the Golden Age Club met Friday at the DAV hall.

The honorees provide music for singing and dancing at the club.

Cakes were provided by Emma Stone, Louise Harrel, Lora Doss and Sarah Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell were honored with the anniversary song. They have been married 59 years.

Plans were made for a picnic Aug. 26 at Harmon Park. The next meeting, Aug. 24 at the DAV hall, will feature a potluck dinner.

Breakin' probed

TWIN FALLS — Police have been investigating a break-in into the storeroom at the Shoshone Apartments at 317 Shoshone St.

Merchandise valued at $200 was reported missing from the storeroom following the break-in. The incident was reported by Ralph Drake to police Thursday morning.

Bristling affair

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police apprehended a bristling porcupine walking down the street on the corner of 7th Ave. N. and 3rd St. N. at 2 a.m. Friday.

The porcupine was taken into the squad car, severely reprimanded, and released at Rock Creek after repeated assurances that he would never street walk again.

Police reported that the incident had been a "touchy" affair.

Residents rap rezoning plan

TWIN FALLS — Twelve residents of Highway 74, south of Twin Falls, have issued a formal objection to the rezoning of the highway to the Twin Falls County Zoning Commission.

The county zoning commission is seeking to rezone the area to commercial and residential of the area propose that the existing agricultural-residential zoning be retained.

The residents say at present there are about 40 residences fronting on the highway between Orchard Drive and the old filter plant road. Since the predominant use is residential they feel it is logical to retain it as residential.

Hansen agrees on City of Rock plan

IDAHOT FALLS — Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, said Friday he was in general agreement with other members of the Idaho Congressional delegation over legislation to include the city of Ricks in the National Park system.

Hansen said he would like to seek the reaction of Idaho persons to legislation proposed by the Park Service before introducing it in Congress. But he said he expected legislation "over the next several weeks."

Spokesmen for both Sens.

Frank Church, D-Idaho, and James McClure, R-Idaho, said the legislation being prepared would establish a National Monument at the site south of Oakley.

Also jailed was 18-year-old Mike McCall, Twin Falls, and booked on charge of petty larceny. McCall was released on $75 bail.

Michael Wamego, 21, Kimberly, was jailed on charges of driving while intoxicated and carrying a concealed weapon. Combined bond was set at $600.

Spokesmen for Safeway Stores Inc., and for Smith's Management Corp., which owns Smith's Food King and Warshaw Markets, refused to comment on the charges. An Albertson's spokesman said he would have to check with headquarters before saying anything.

Twin Falls man held on drugs

TWIN FALLS — Bill Walburn, 30, Twin Falls, was in Twin Falls County Jail Saturday night at charge of possession of a controlled substance. Bond was set at $1,000. Walburn was picked up Friday, according to records in the sheriff's office.

Also jailed was 18-year-old Mike McCall, Twin Falls, and booked on charge of petty larceny. McCall was released on $75 bail.

Michael Wamego, 21, Kimberly, was jailed on charges of driving while intoxicated and carrying a concealed weapon. Combined bond was set at $600.

Stopping-Out

This year, at least 48,000 young people are "stopping-out" of the educational treadmill — taking a year off between high school and college.

In Magic Valley, according to school officials, there are scores who are taking this step this year.

A few years ago it would have been unheard of for a student who had successfully fought his way through a series of examinations, interviews and applications paperwork to consider postponing his freshman year. Most colleges were reluctant to hold a student's place for other than health or financial reasons.

Not so today, writes author Mary Scott Welch in a recent issue of McCall's. Whether it's called stopping-out, deferred admission, deferred enrollment or educational leave, colleges across the country are developing plans for guaranteeing students admission or readmission at the time of their choice.

Most educators have not only recognized but have actually begun to encourage this year-off trend and to save places in the next class.

MR. SPECTATOR

The Courthouse Plans

Remember awhile back when Mr. Spectator, on behalf of the Twin Falls county commissioners, made a public plea in an effort to find the original plans for the Courthouse. Seems as though some work was going to be done and they had to know just how the old place would stand up.

Well, as a result of the plea, a set of plans were found. Not the original ones but ones made at a later date by the late Frank Fonda, a local architect. His widow informed officials that such plans were available and they were picked up.

So in the picture at the top of this article — Bill Wiseman, commissioner; Ivan Stone, architect, and Bill Chancey, commission chairman, take a look at the plans in question. Stone is architect for the planned courthouse remodeling and now has no problems with knowing how the building was constructed.

So, you see, cooperation does work out and we are happy to have had a hand in the thing.

GIVEAWAY DEPT.

We have free daisy plants. Bring your own containers. Be prepared to do a little digging. For more information call Mrs. A. G. Biswell at 934-5880 or see her at her home at 445 Colorado Street in Gooding. We have two dogs, four months for such students, she writes.

"At more and more colleges and universities, it's now official policy to defer enrollment on mere request, often with no questions asked. Many educators believe that's just what some young people really need to do."

She quotes Frank Newman, chairman of a Department of Health, Education and Welfare task force which produced the Newman Report on Higher Education:

"A person who graduates from college has spent 16 or 17 years doing nothing but going to school. The student should get out of the cocoon once in a while for his own sake and for society's, too. He should break the lockstep to find out what real life is like."

Those most likely to take advantage of stopping-out come from middle, and upper-middle class families, however. Children of blue-collar workers tend to be more conventionally ambitious than their "white-collar" counterparts, says Mrs. Welch, and truly disadvantaged students can't afford the luxury of stopping-out.

WASHINGTON — With the Congress in recess and the White House in shock, an opportunity is at hand to take one more look at the Supreme Court's last term. In the conservative view, at least, such an inspection discloses much more good than ill, but the ill deserves attention.

A few statistics first. The term produced 156 opinions, all but 46 of them signed. Chief Justice Burger led the Court with 18 opinions, including the Court's potentially troubling holdings in the several obscenity cases. Powell wrote 17, most notably in the matter of state aid to parochial schools. White also wrote 17. Stewart and Rehnquist 16. Douglas and Blackmun 15. Brennan 14 and Marshall 12.

The clerk's office keeps no definitive statistics on dissents, but Douglas probably surpassed every record that Holmes ever set. Douglas dissented in precisely half the cases — 78 out of 156 — for a near .500 batting average. Brennan, with 52 dissents, and Marshall, with 49, were not even in the running.

The term saw 31 cases decided by 5-4 margins. In 15 of these, including several of the most significant decisions, the Nixon Four (Burger, Blackmun, Powell and Rehnquist) found an ally in Justice White. In two other cases, including the landmark Rodriguez decision on school financing, the Nixon Four were joined by Justice Stewart. In only a single case during the entire term, this one involving food stamps, were the four Nixon appointees outvoted by the other five.

The one sore-thumb decision of the term came on January 22, in the Texas and Georgia abortion cases known as Roe vs. Wade. Speaking through Justice Blackmun, who usually is a paragon of judicial restraint, a seven-man majority held that during the first three months of pregnancy, a woman has a fundamental right to an abortion; during the second three months, the state has a right to regulate the act; and during the third trimester, the unborn child has some rights of its own.

This bizarre holding, in my own view, was a shocking throwback to the judicial ailment known as the Lochner Syndrome. The abortion dates from 1905, when the high court embarked upon a series of cases in which the justices wrote their own social and economic prejudices into the Fourteenth Amendment. The abortion ruling saw Lochner born again; it was pure judicial legislation, unsupported by any plausible reading of the Constitution. It is beyond understanding how three of the Nixon Four (Rehnquist) could have joined in the majority view.

Several other bummers marred the term. Justice Powell has the finest legal mind on the Court, but he has yet to get a handle on the First Amendment, in terms of freedom of the press. His opinion in the case of the Pittsburgh Press, prohibiting the newspaper from identifying jobs in its classified columns in terms of male or female interest, gave new support to the pernicious notion that the First Amendment does not apply to advertising matter.

Traditionalists also were offended by the Court's 5-4 ruling of June 21, approving six-member juries in federal civil cases. The Court erred badly in U. S. vs. Enmons, decided on February 22, when it held that the federal Hobbs Act cannot be invoked against union violence. Still another regrettable decision came in May, when an odd coalition, speaking through Douglas, nullified a Burbank city ordinance prohibiting jet takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7

Taken all in all, however, the term produced about the results that conservatives have hoped for. With few exceptions, states were upheld in the exercise of their legislative powers. Of 24 significant cases of criminal law, the liberal bloc prevailed in only two. By a 4-4 tie vote, the Court refused to approve a drastic expansion of the law of school desegregation. In a series of reapportionment cases, the Nixon Four succeeded in curtailing the doctrinaire excesses of the Warren years.

The abortion decision is hard to forgive and impossible to explain, but if the Court under Burger produces only one such disaster per term, conservatives can count their blessings and give thanks to Richard Nixon. During our 16 years in exterior darkness, gnashing our teeth at Chief Justice Warren, it was one such disaster per month.

Can you imagine the disappointment of the vine growers in the area?"

"Is it too late to persuade the French to move their future tests to France?"

"All of us in the Pacific hope not. As a matter of fact, Australia, New Zealand and Japan have offered to pay for shipping everything back to France, including all the technicians and military personnel. We would hate to see them go, but it is our belief that the French will never believe they have sufficient deterrent unless they can see it explode with their own eyes."

"Then New Zealanders and Australians harbor no bitterness toward the French?"

"Of course not. Have you ever met a Frenchman you didn't like?"

Laird has already had his way in some crucial issues.

John Connally became unhappy because there was no clear-cut idea of what should be done and what he should do. He is a man who wants action — a great deal of action.

Those Bombs For Burgundy

WASHINGTON — There has been a lot of misinformation in the press as to why New Zealand has raised such strong objections to the French holding their atomic tests in the Pacific. Anthony Cubert-Jones, a New Zealander, told me: "We are not against France having an atomic bomb. As a matter of fact, we welcome it. The French deserve a bomb. They've earned it."

"But what's the solution?"

"I think the French should hold their atomic tests in France so everyone can see them."

"Are you suggesting the next atomic explosion take place over Paris?"

"The French taxpayer has paid a billion dollars to have his government develop an atomic bomb. But he has been unable to see what he's getting for his money. All he can do is read in the newspapers that France has set off a bomb in the atoll of Mururoa. He has to take the French government's word that the explosion was a success. We New Zealanders feel this is very unfair to French citizens who have paid for it but get none of the joy of actually seeing an atomic bomb go off."

"But what's the solution?"

"I wonder why the French never thought of it?"

"I suppose they thought those of us who live in the Pacific should get the benefit of their bomb. Perhaps they believed it would help tourism in Tahiti. I can't speak for their thinking, but if I were a Frenchman, I'd be damned mad that I didn't get the fallout from a bomb I paid for with my hard-earned francs."

"Why do you think Pompidou initiated the explosion take place in Micronesia instead of Burgundy or Bordeaux?"

"This is only conjecture on my part, but I suspect he was afraid the thing wouldn't go off."

"It would have been very embarrassing if he told everyone in France he was going to explode his bomb in Burgundy, and the thing pifft."

A Real State Of Flux

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Even apart from Watergate, the past three months at the White House have been a difficult period.

Since the resignations of H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Melvin Laird have made a series of moves to open the gates and bring more people in on decisions.

Haig sees that more men and women see the President and that he's briefed on a wider variety of news and commentary.

An effort has been made to decentralize decisions, get officials to do more on their own, not wait for orders from the top to get them started.

But President Nixon, while he sees a wider array of visitors, still likes to seclude himself.

Men on the White House staff used to taking explicit orders from Haldeman, Ehrlichman, or Dean tend to wait to be told what to do. Rather than searching out and bringing up proposals, or taking action they know is needed, they wait for orders more often than the new regime likes. As a result officials in close contact with Haig, when he was with Dr. Henry Kissinger — even during the worst of the Haldeman-Kissinger fights.

According to White House sources, Haig has taken over in a level-handed way. There are no longer a few favorites. He thinks of himself as a channel, not an arbiter.

Laird's influence also is running high, despite some rumors to the contrary. But it has been slower than expected in developing because of the amorphous situation at the White House and because of the difficulties he's having in developing an acceptable domestic program in this period of economic crisis. But

Do You Know That If You Are Alive You Have Few Real Secrets?

By O.A. (GUS) KELLER
Editor, Times-News

People around these parts know more about you than you would expect.

When you have your telephone disconnected, people know it. When you have your water shut off, people know it. When you are making time payments on a refrigerator, an automobile or what have you, people know it.

When you get a divorce the knowledge of that fact is public property. When you do most anything some — usually lots of people — know all about it. In fact scores of businesses and individuals get a printed form with all this material available.

Now, knowing that all these things are "public property" why is it not reasonable to assume there are people who know where you were last night, how much you drank or didn't drink, who you went home with or didn't go home with — or if you even went home at all? You think this is all bad? Don't you believe it! The best (or worst, depending which way you look at it) might be yet to come. Now there are some places where all the information about you, your habits, your financial situation, your private life — even your morals — are stored in computer data banks. And these records of yours are being decided by data-processing specialists as if they involved nothing more than questions of efficient technique.

Something is now going to be done about all this "personal information" data which can be used for a multitude of purposes — many of them harmful to you and your future and really your own personal business, although there are many who make it their business.

This step — planned through corrective legislation which will hopefully be adopted before all our personal information is available to anyone who asks for it — is being taken by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It comes as a report from an advisory committee of 24 members drawn from government, industry, the legal and academic professions and the general public. It is, according to Caspar W. Weinberger, HEW secretary, "an example of free people, governing themselves, who refuse to submit even to the possibility of technological tyranny."

The key challenge is that computer-based personal-data record keeping should be examined broadly as important issues of social policy rather than as narrowly conceived questions of record-keeping technique and imaginative system design.

The report, entitled "Records, Computers, and the Rights of Citizens," recommends:

(1) Federal legislation guaranteeing individuals the right to find out what information is being maintained about them in computerized systems, and to obtain a copy of it on demand.

(2) That the legislation also allow a person to contest the accuracy, pertinence and timeliness of any information in a computer-accessible record about him.

(3) That record-keeping organizations be required to inform individuals on request, of all uses made of information that is being kept about them in computerized files.

(4) There must be no personal data record-keeping systems whose very existence are secret.

(5) There must be a way for an individual to find out what information about him is in a record and how it is used.

(6) There must be a way for an individual to prevent information about him that was obtained for one purpose from being used or made available for other purposes without his consent.

(7) There must be a way for an individual to correct or amend a record of identifiable information about him.

(8) Any organization creating, maintaining, using or disseminating records of identifiable personal data must assure the reliability of the data for their intended use and must take precautions to prevent misuse of the data.

The report was also critical of the Social Security administration in attempting to make the Social Security number an effective standard personal identifier.

And just for your information, it might just be unlawful as it now stands for the State of Idaho to issue your driving license under your Social Security number.

But all this should lead to one thing — the right of an individual to have a few things of a personal nature left to himself.

And it is a step in the right direction. Even in a small community like Twin Falls it would stagger your imagination if you realized what certain people know about your habits — all of them!

"Psst!"

He Told Pres. Nixon

WASHINGTON I was gorging on an old shoe with ketchup, the other day when I heard about Bernard Goldstein, a big hotel and restaurant meat supplier hereabouts. Goldstein announced he had turned down a Richard Nixon order for 15 pounds of filet mignon and New York sirloin steak.

If Mrs Housewife feels the meat crunch, so should the White House," Goldstein told the Washington Star-News. "They started the shortage and they should know about it. They don't deserve any better treatment than anyone else."

I suspect Goldstein is an undercover Democrat, but I also suspect his point went down well with the chitlins and ac power and the mince horseshoe Main Street has been eating lately. President Nixon's problem is we got nobody else to blame for high prices and shortages. It is all very well to take a posthumous pot shot at Lyndon Johnson, who sponsored inflation by failing to fund the Vietnam War, but Nixon's here and Johnson ain't.

Fifteen pounds of filet mignon and New York sirloin Nixon must be loaded, and all this time I had supposed he was short of cash and that's why the government had to spend a couple or three million to make his private homes in Florida and California livable. Good night, a body could almost buy a new car, with a TV set and a full-time hostess, for the price of the kind of fodder the President ordered.

It says here beef prices were frozen until Sept. 12, but somebody was kidding. I dragged my starving frame to a supermarket the other day to look at some beef cuts and if $3.90 a pound is the frozen price for round steak, it's time to defrost. That night, my summer-bachelor quarters were festooned with the bouquet of Spam smothered with a half-cup of watery tomato soup.

Moreover, I see where our ever-loving Congress is prepared to spend another couple of billion clams on foreign aid this fiscal year. What with the balance of payments deficit and all, this seems a bit much. I am all in favor of helping the needy in Afghanistan but right now I desire the enactment of legislation to feed the hungry in America, notably me.

Apparently such a development seems impossible. We seem to have sent all our soybeans to Japan and most of our grain to the Soviet Union, causing whopping price increases in commodities used to feed our livestock, and the result is that a housewife must visit her friendly neighborhood loan

Forum Rules

Forum letters must be concerned with topics of general interest and must be of a reasonable length. The editors of the Times-News reserve the right to refuse publication. In their opinion, the subject matter is of a libelous nature, is not in good taste or is repetitious and has previously been thoroughly covered in the forum.

All letters must bear the signature and address of the writer. The name of the writer will appear when published unless there is a personal request that it be withheld and the reason for such a request stated. This request will then be considered by the editors and it will either be granted or the letter will be returned to the writer.

Editor, Times-News:

We hope Dan Duarte succeeds with his bi-lingual school textbook (Times News, Aug. 4). We tried using a reader for 7-year-old school children in Mexico City for teaching "Anglo" youngsters Spanish. But it would have to be "translated" into "Western American Spanish" (or some such title). Lest this seem facetious try some of the following words on Mexican-American friends: vivaracho.

remolón, bichos, monos (not alone), gernelas, ama (not love), gambusino, bríbones, cachorro (not rude), taller, estampa (not postage stamp), tatas — and a lot more.

We hope someone gives us an adjusted grammar, lexicon and idiom list so Anglos can learn to speak to Mexican-Americans in their own language. How about it Mr. Duarte?

BERRY'S WORLD

Editor, Times-News:

In this readers opinion wages should be equal for all in a given line of work, such as hauling produce, tending a service station or "manning" a typewriter.

Working conditions could be discussed by a panel, regularly representing employers and employees and arrangements made to carry out the specifications. Then expensive labor unions and strikes could be avoided.

And a better satisfied working force, employed in safe, sanitary and pleasant conditions, having been taken into the employers confidence, would cheerfully do their work better and be more loyal. With longer tenure they would learn more about their jobs and be able to train their successors when necessary.

Men would be inclined to remain more months or years at the jobs women, seemingly by necessity have to keep.

Endless jobs which are now held or classified for women could be well handled by men. There are plenty of men to go around.

Unemployment figures would drop, welfare rolls would diminish, bureaucracy jobs would be fewer, homes would be more stable, more children would finish high school and consider vocational training or fields requiring college education.

If this all came about, communities would be better and investors would know better which way to jump.

Employers couldn't play one race against another, one cult group against another, one national origin against another, older and younger employees against one another, high school diploma holders against those without and the local people against the transients.

Bombing halt to leave Cambodians demoralized

(c) Chicago Daily News

PHNOM PENH — With three days to go before the American bombing halt in Cambodia, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the end of U.S. air support will have a serious psychological impact on the tattered 200,000-man government army.

While the tactical repercussions of the Aug. 15 bombing cutoff ordered by Congress are a matter of debate among military men and diplomats, these sources generally concede that move will leave the Cambodian Army demoralized.

The Cambodians never really had to fight without American air support," one diplomat said. "They have become so dependent on having almost unlimited bombs at their front lines they really don't know how to fight without them."

So important is the bombing, claims Sec. of State William Rogers, that when it stops next week, Cambodian forces, "and in some cases civilians whom those forces are protecting," will have to retreat from exposed positions to positions where they can defend themselves and be resupplied."

Rogers made the statement in an affidavit in a government effort to win a lawsuit seeking to have the bombing declared unconstitutional and ended immediately.

For the last several months an average of more than 200 jet fighter attacks and dozens of B-52 raids have been carried out in Cambodia daily and are credited in some circles with keeping the present pro-Western government in power.

As a result Cambodian troops have learned to sit back and let bombing and strafing American planes carry the brunt of the battle more often than not.

Now with the end of the bombing in sight, officers and enlisted men at key defensive positions around Phnom Penh are displaying lack of self confidence in their ability to fight without air support.

This was reflected in interview after interview with troops deployed around the Cambodian capital city.

"If the American bombing stops," said Maj. Men Mony, "we will have a serious situation. We don't have enough troops to fight alone, without the bombing. It is important the Americans continue to help us. Every day the enemy is reinforcing its forces around Phnom Penh."

Lt. Kong Youen, commander of a small garrison protecting Highway 1 about 10 miles east of Phnom Penh, said "the situation will get worse after the bombing stops. It is my humble hope it will continue after Aug. 15."

"It will be very difficult for us to survive after the bombing stops," said Sgt. Maj. Chan Chem. "The United States must continue to bomb as long as there is a war here."

"When the bombing stops it will be as if the Americans abandoned us," said Cpl. Chap Sarun. "You must write in your newspaper that the Cambodian people cannot win without the bombing."

DETROIT (UPI) — Contract talks between Chrysler and the United Auto Workers will be suspended Monday to give UAW Vice President Douglas A. Fraser a chance to take a first-hand look at working conditions in the plants.

One of the 22 Detroit-area Chrysler plants—Detroit Forge—was closed for the third day today as 1,400 men continued a wildcat walkout over alleged unsafe working conditions.

"Management's refusal to correct outrageous conditions is the reason for the plant closing," said Leon Klea, president of UAW Local 47.

Klea said three times in a two-week period a defective overhead crane has dumped tons of steel on areas where workers walk.

"It's difficult sitting here trying to determine where the truth is," Fraser said. "I don't want to have to take anybody's word about what's going on. I want to see for myself."

The union executive said there could be "a lot more strikes not related to contract negotiations" if working conditions in the plants are not improved.

The Detroit Forge plant is critical to Chrysler operations.

Teachers honored

JEROME — Visiting teachers of the Gooding Stake Relief Society were honored Thursday afternoon at an annual visiting teachers convention at the Gooding LDS Stakehouse in Jerome.

Also honored was Mrs. Lydia Nielsen, Gooding, who has served 64 years as a Relief Society visiting teacher. Both ladies were presented gifts.

Budgeting said 'must' for children

NEW YORK (UPI) — Budgeting is an economic "must" for nations, businesses and individuals, so teaching a child how to manage money should be done as early as possible.

Since spending habits are acquired at an early age, that's when parents should start the learning process.

Children first notice money when they visit stores with parents or friends. Shopping trips with pre-schoolers might be the best time to start the learning process, according to "Consumer Views," a First National City Bank of New York publication which has reviewed the question. "Give your toddler or five-year old some change and let him pay for his own crayons," the bank suggests.

Once the child becomes aware of numbers let him decide whether he wants to spend his coins on one soda or a pack of gum. Under five or six, according to the experts, children still are too young for a weekly allowance. They don't have a sense of "tomorrow," a necessary ingredient in any such planning.

Troops fight mosquitoes

(c) Chicago Daily News
KANTARA, Occupied Egypt
Israel and Egyptian troops facing each other across the Suez Canal are fighting a common enemy now: mosquitoes.

As they marked the start of the fourth straight year of cease-fire the only other consequence of the War of Attrition that raged along this motionless 100-mile-long waterway is boredom.

Looking west from atop an Israeli stronghold one sees Egyptian soldiers strolling from foxhole to observation post and back again surely knowing that they are being watched by Israeli eyes, but not seeming to care.

The Israelis standing out in the open directly opposite the Egyptian positions are just as nonchalant. Nobody here seems to think that the three years of almost total quiet that characterized this Middle Eastern front line could ever come to an end.

It was at midnight, Aug. 8, 1970, that the Israeli and Egyptian guns finally began to cool after the murderous "War of Attrition" had raged for more than two years in the aftermath of the Six-Day War of June, 1967.

When the U.S. sponsored cease-fire went into effect no one thought it would last more than a month or two — certainly not three years.

But it has. At one of the Israelis' canal front mini-fortresses on the outskirts of this once-prosperous little Egyptian city the troops were walking proof that hostilities have become a thing of the past.

Gone were the helmets and flak jackets that used to be mandatory in case of Egyptian barrages or air strikes. Instead, the informality was typified by bare backs and shorts.

The mosquito problem is a direct result of the Israeli-Egyptian "war after the war" that was fought along this watery cease-fire line.

"They breed in the Egyptians' fresh water canal that runs parallel to the Suez Canal," an Israeli said, pointing to the west across the waterway.

"Our aerial and artillery bombardments ruined the fresh water conduit," he went on. "As a result, the water no longer can flow there and it becomes an ideal breeding place for mosquitoes."

A doctor compared the relative luxury of the Israelis' mini-fortresses to the primitive conditions across the way.

He referred to the plentiful supply of water piped in from the rear echelons, to the disinfected latrines, the electricity, telephone links to local proper and foam rubber coots.

"The Egyptians don't have any of these things," he said. "Sanitation on their side is appalling. We can see from here that elementary hygiene, including latrines, simply doesn't exist."

"We have all the water we want — take four or five showers a day — the Egyptians don't have showers at all and maybe that's why they take swims in the canal. The Israelis are not allowed to do this."

One of the troopers was asked whether they would celebrate the end of the third year or the start of the fourth year of cease-fire Friday and he said it was the latter.

He is sure things will remain tranquil:

"Both sides want the same thing — peace. Both are afraid of another war. It isn't good for anyone."

Texas body hunt delayed

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies patrolled the sand and salt grass along a Texas beachfront Saturday where officers expect to find more graves of boys who were ravished, murdered and buried by a homosexual bachelor and two teen-aged accomplices.

Police have dug up 22 bodies at three locations, but high weekend tides covered some of the search area on the beach near High Island and the hunt for more victims was delayed until Monday.

"What we are watching for is people who would disturb the soft area," said Chambers County Sheriff Lewis B. Otter. "I've got boys making trips at intervals down there to make sure there's no one digging or upsetting the apparel."

The two teen-agers, Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, and David Brooks, 18, told police they buried six or more bodies along the beachfront. Both had admitted they took part in the three-year sex, sadism and slaying scheme with Dean Allen Corll, 33.

Henley was jailed Saturday at suburban Pasadena. Brooks was locked up in Houston. Both have been charged with murder. Henley said he killed Corll in self-defense during a paint-sniffing sex orgy Wednesday.

Anxious parents in the Houston area, from across the nation and even foreign countries, called police seeking information about missing sons. But police said it will take months to identify the remains of the victims, and some may never be identified.

"We are getting calls from all over the United States and Canada. We had one call from Germany," Detective D. M. Fults said. "There are thousands of people missing in the United States alone."

In his confession to police, Brooks discussed several of the slayings casually, saying some of the victims — lured for Corll by the two youths who promised sex, marijuana and liquor — were tortured for days before they were killed.

"I remember one boy who was killed. Dean kept this boy around the house for about four days before he killed him. I think I helped bury this boy."

but I don't remember where it was. This was about two years ago.

"It really upset Dean to kill this boy because he really liked him."

Then Brooks, recently married with a pregnant wife, told police of another youngster who he procured for Corll. Brooks said Corll had homosexual relations with the boy, who then was sent home.

"I had taken him home one time, but he wouldn't get out because he wanted to go back to Dean," Brooks said. "I took him back and Dean ended up killing him."

Both Henley and Brooks led police to burial sites. Officers dug up 17 bodies in a tin boat shed in Houston, found four more near Lake Sam Rayburn at Broadus, Tex., and two more on the beach east of Galveston.

"Brooks is relieved now that he's got all this off his chest," said Houston Detective K. D. Porter. "I think any murderer would be relieved."

Police said it might be difficult to find more bodies on the beach when the search resumes Monday.

"They were buried at the edge of the grass line. This shifts in a year's period," said Detective Jack Hamel. "We'll probably have to take a machete and I guess dig back as far as you can go to uncover the graves. It is obvious that if you take a shovel, you could spend the rest of your life at it."

Brooks said they buried one victim to the north at the lake site, then returned later with another body.

"When we got there, Dean and Wayne found that the first one had come to the surface and either a foot or a hand was above ground," Brooks said. "When they buried this one the second time, they put some type of sheet on top of him to keep him down."

And then the youth who wears round, tin-rimmed glasses perched on his nose and whose brown hair hangs almost to his shoulders said:

"I regret that this happened and I'm sorry for the kids' families."

Gainesville conspiracy meets told

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI)

The government's star witness in the Gainesville Eight conspiracy trial testified Saturday he bought a wrist rocket slingshot with FBI money and smoked marijuana at a meeting with the defendants.

But William W. Lemmer, an FBI informer, denied under cross-examination that he ever suggested hand grenade attacks on officers and sabotaging trucks at Ft. Benning, Ga. He also denied instigating bomb threats to a Columbus, Ga. newspaper and radio station, or that he led an "occupation" of the Lyndon B. Johnson Memorial Library in Austin, Tex.

The 23-year-old former Green Beret has sworn he was at meetings in the Gainesville home of defendant Scott Camil when plans were laid for an assault on the 1972 Republican National Convention with weapons including wrist rocket slingshots, crossbows, homemade grenades and incendiaries.

When asked if he was taking drugs during the Gainesville planning meetings, Lemmer said:

"I didn't really take anything. I sat around and smoked marijuana just like everyone at the Gainesville meeting."

He said a slingshot he bought from Scott Camil for $2.60 was paid for out of his FBI expense account.

In his opening statement Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Carruth told the jury the government would prove, among other things, that the conspirators planned to conceal the slingshots in the groin of their trousers or around their ankles under their bellbottoms.

But Judge Winston E. Arnou wouldn't allow defendant John W. Kniffen, 21, to question Lemmer about an interview he had with FBI Agent Dick O'Connell on July 21 and 22, after the attic meetings.

Out of the hearing of the jury, Kniffen was allowed to read part of a transcript of that recorded interview dealing with a discussion of the slingshots, the kind used by hunters to kill small game.

With three pig-tailed members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War handling much of the cross-examination, the defense sought to show that Lemmer acted as an "agent provocateur," inciting violence to discredit the antiwar group.

Patterson asked Lemmer if he had ever discussed with friends in Georgia a plan to sabotage all the vehicles at Ft. Benning by pouring sugar in the gas tank.

"No, I did not," Lemmer answered.

Nixon ponders US bomb halt

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon summoned foreign policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger to his mountain retreat Saturday, presumably to discuss the increasingly tense military situation in Cambodia as the United States prepares to halt bombing raids at midnight Tuesday.

Kissinger was accompanied by presidential aide Bryce Harlow to Camp David, where Nixon has been working since Wednesday on his Watergate cable. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the Kissinger-Nixon meeting did not concern Watergate.

The meeting coincided with reports that exiled Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk sent a cable Friday to Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, an old friend, calling for an end to all U.S. interference in Cambodia.

Neither the White House nor the State Department would comment on the Sihanouk cable. Mansfield was traveling in his home state of Montana and could not be reached for comment.

Nixon has agreed to abide by a compromise deadline set by Congress to halt all bombing of Cambodia at midnight Tuesday.

But in a recent letter to the congressional leadership, he noted the United States would continue to provide economic and military assistance to the Lon Nol regime.

State Department officials said they feared the bombing halt would provide a distinct advantage for the Cambodian insurgents — some of them sympathetic to Sihanouk — who have encircled the capital at Phnom Penh.

Agence France Presse, the French news agency, said in a report monitored Saturday by the U.S. Foreign Broadcast Information Service that Sihanouk's cable to Mansfield prescribed conditions for a peace settlement in Cambodia.

AFP, which received a copy of the cable in Peking, said Sihanouk warned that "the only conditions for peace in honor ... were a complete and definitive halt to aerial bombing and all other direct or indirect U.S.

military intervention in Cambodia, then a complete and definitive end to all aid to the self-styled Khmer republic" of President Lon Nol.

Saturday was Nixon's fourth consecutive day at Camp David and he was surrounded by an entourage of aides and speech writers working on the speech he will give the middle of next week in response to Watergate allegations.

It will be the President's first in-depth statement on Watergate since his 4,000-word position paper on May 22, five days after the Senate Watergate committee began its hearings.

Among those with Nixon were Raymond K. Price, his chief speech writer; White House chief of staff Gen. Alexander M. Haig; Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler; Patrick Buchanan, another top speech writer; and Nixon's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods.

The President, who might return to Washington Sunday night, was expected to sign the federal highway aid bill early in the week.

In his cable, Sihanouk was said to have proposed that the United States provide a safe haven for the top echelon of the Lon Nol government.

Phase IV 'headache' due

Despite administration attempts to make the expected price boom as palatable as possible, consumers may find some increases hard to swallow.

Food prices, particularly, will continue to be a headache. Last week the Agriculture Department predicted shoppers would pay 20 cents more for groceries in 1973 than a year earlier. If the forecast holds true, it would be the biggest one-year jump in food retail food prices since 1947.

When Nixon started the nation by imposing an across-the-board 90-day wage-price freeze on Aug. 15, 1971, he called it a "temporary" measure that would kick excessive inflation without the mandatory wage and price controls that crush economic and personal freedom.

The medicine seemed to work. Under the subsequent Phase II program in effect from November, 1971, until last January, inflation cooled dramatically. But when tough wage-price standards were scrapped for the Phase III program of voluntary guidelines from January to last June, inflation accelerated at the fastest pace in 22 years.

Nixon stepped in June 13 with a new price freeze to be followed by a tough, comprehensive Phase IV program designed to return the nation once and for all to a free market economy.

The President's top economic advisers, most of whom share Nixon's distaste for controls, have declined to state how long Phase IV will last. But Phase V, they insist, will be "phase out."

Here is the basic rule governing price increases under Phase IV:

A company may add a penny to its pricetags for every cent it incurs in higher labor, raw material and other costs. However, nothing extra can be added for profit.

The biggest companies, those with annual sales of more than $100 million, must give the CLC 30 days advance notice before boosting prices.

Recognizing that a 2 per cent increase might be overly generous in one industry but a hardship in another, the CLC has published separate price rules on top of that general guideline for retailers, wholesalers, and the food, health, insurance and petroleum industries.

As in the past, Internal Revenue Service agents will be assigned to insure the stabilization rules are being followed. The IRS already has added 1,000 new employees to cope with the watchdog effort.

Communist roads run to S. Vietnam

(c) N.Y. Times Service

SAIGON — A network of roads the Communist side has been energetically building in South Vietnam since the American bombing halt last January now reaches more than 250 miles from the North Vietnamese border to the central part of the country, U.S. intelligence officials say.

One of the roads has been pushed to within sight of South Vietnam's main north-south artery, Route 1, in Binh Dinh Province. Another, running inland parallel to the Laos-Cambodia border, appears planned to eventually stretch all the way to the Viet Cong's secret headquarters in Tayninh Province near Saigon, the officials believe.

These Communists efforts, the analysts say, are designed

The Communists have already taken advantage of their new roads this summer to move small groups of settlers from Laos, Cambodia and reportedly even North Vietnam, itself, into sparsely populated areas of the south. And at the same time, the U.S. analysts report, the Communists have repaired 15 former American airstrips in their territory, some of them long enough to accommodate MIG jet fighters.

These Communists efforts, the analysts say, are designed to give physical substance to the Viet Cong's claim to govern their own state in South Vietnam.

"They can use those roads for political purposes, moving people and making their territory more attractive," remarked one American in the Central Highlands.

"But if the Communists find they aren't getting anywhere politically, they have the option of using the roads to move their heavy artillery and tanks right into range of government outposts and cities," the official added.

Showing planned

REV. and Mrs. Grady Fannin, David Wilkerson Crusades, will show a film, "The Rapture," at the First Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited.

Pilot plant produces natural gas from coal

(c) Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO Engineers have achieved an important breakthrough in meeting the nation's energy crisis by converting coal to gas.

The landmark development occurred in a pilot plant built and operated by the Institute of Gas Technology (IGT) an affiliate of the Illinois Institute of Technology.

For a full week, the IGT plant successfully demonstrated the world's first large-scale conversion of coal to substitute natural gas.

Interior Sec. Rogers C. B. Morton Friday hailed the accomplishment as a "major milestone" in making the fullest use of vast U.S. coal reserves.

Henry Linden, director of IGT, said the HYGAS process offers the best prospect for easing the U.S. energy crunch after the year 1980.

"This approach will not solve our immediate energy problem," said Linden.

"In the longer range, however, coal gasification offers tremendous potential. By 1990, it should be possible to produce 3 trillion cubic feet of gas, or eight to 10 per cent of our total supply, from coal."

Studies of methods to convert coal into gas began in Germany around World War I. IGT began its studies in 1946. The HYGAS plant, which resembles a refinery, was completed in 1972.

Not until last month was the plant able to turn three tons an hour of coal into pipeline-quality gas with a heat content of around 1,000 BTU (British Thermal Units).

"This gives us a clear signal that it is technically feasible on a large scale to convert coal to substitute natural gas in a completely modern technology system," Linden said.

Merry Pet

Linda Merry, DVM

Question: We would like some advice on snakebite in dogs. Each summer we spend a week of our vacation camping and hunting arrowheads. We take our dog with us and all enjoy it very much.

This year we will be in a rocky area that could have rattlesnakes. Could you tell us what to do if the dog gets bitten? Also, what should be in a snakebite kit.

Answer: I'll tell you what to do about snakebite right after I tell you how to prevent it. Eighty per cent of snakebite deaths in the U.S. are caused by rattlers and certainly they're our prime assailants in these parts.

So, try to avoid a boundary dispute over the areas they like: warm rocky ledges, heavy foliage, sunny dens. Keep your dog in sight when you're near potential snake areas. Carry a snakebite kit and don't get too far from transportation to civilization.

A snakebite kit is a simple thing to prepare. It should include a long, flat, wide strip of cloth for use as a tourniquet, a sterile blade or knife, some means of cleansing (such as packages of moist tissues), suction cups, long shoe lace for a muzzle, gauze pads, some adhesive tape and a few aspirin if you wish.

If your dog has the misfortune of chasing a viper until it catches him (as 15,000 of our domestic animals do each year), keep a cool head and see that he does the same. Excitement and exertion push venom along the circulatory path. Immobilize the dog immediately, muzzle him if necessary.

Slay and keep the snake for positive identification if you can do so without endangering yourself. If the bite is on legs or tail, apply a tourniquet above the fang marks.

A tourniquet is too tight if you can't easily slip a finger under it. Once it's on, leave it there, loosening it only in proportion to swelling. Don't repeatedly remove and reapply it since that acts as a pump to shoot venom into the system.

Now clean up the bite and cut straight through the skin over the fang wounds.

Girl watching always popular

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Girl-watching will always be a favorite male sport—police notwithstanding.

Police Chief Thomas Vaughan last week assigned three officers to the two-block Hartford Civic Center construction site after a woman complained a worker verbally harassed her.

But the ogles and catcalls at female passersby continued.

"How can they stop it?" asked one construction worker. "Men are always gonna like to watch girls no matter what they do."

Heart pacemaker perfected for life

By WILLIAM HINES

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — Scientists at a space-age laboratory near here have perfected a fully chargeable battery-powered heart pacemaker that they say will last a lifetime without ever needing replacement.

At least 20 of them have been implanted in human beings since the first of the year and are becoming available commercially in extremely limited quantities. All the patients ranging in age from 33 to 90 years, are said to be doing well.

Three of the patients, who received their pacemakers at the Johns Hopkins University Medical Center in Baltimore, were present at a press conference at the university's applied physics laboratory, where the device was developed.

Engineers there worked for 4½ years to adapt technology originally developed for space satellites to the markedly different but equally rigorous requirements of medicine. What they came up with is a self-contained, 3½-ounce heart assist device not much bigger than a pocket cigarette lighter and quite similar in appearance.

It is now being manufactured and marketed — under the name "Pacesetter" — by a west coast electronics concern under an exclusive licensing arrangement that gives Johns Hopkins an $18 royalty for each unit produced.

Scientists at the laboratory claimed three distinct advantages for their invention over the type of cardiac pacemaker now in use.

First, because its battery can be recharged weekly by a device that propagates a magnetic field through the patient's skin with the periodic replacement operations regular pacemaker wearers must undergo about every other year are eliminated.

Second, it is smaller than other pacemakers, which is important because the assist device is implanted under the skin outside the rib cage.

Third, it is not susceptible to radio-frequency interference from such sources as microwave ovens, radars and automobile ignitions, all of which are potentially dangerous to wearers of ordinary pacemakers.

Although the pacesetter costs about 1½ times as much as a conventional pacemaker, its developers claim a cost advantage for it because no replacement is necessary. Ordinary devices cost about $1,200 and must be replaced four or five times every decade. The total pacesetter system costs about $1,800.

Most comprehensive medical-insurance plans such as Blue Cross pay for cardiac-assist devices, and surgical plans of the Blue Shield type cover the implantation operation.

Since pacemakers first came into use about 10 years ago, an estimated 150,000 to 200,000 patients in the non-communist countries have received them, according to prevailing estimates. (There are no figures available from Eastern Europe and China.) About half the pacemaker patients are in the United States and projections 10 years hence predict 60,000 will be needed in this country each year.

In contrast to this potential demand, the present supply of the new-type assist devices is fewer than half a dozen a week. This is the present capacity of the production line at the California plant (Pacesetter Systems Inc., of Sylmar) where they are made.

Mind Your Money

By PETER WEAVER
Q — Recently, I heard that a couple with a joint checking account will have problems if one of the parties dies. The survivor can't write checks on the account. Is this true? — Mrs. H.D.H., Redding, Calif.

or savings account for the other partner in case of an emergency.
Q — I'm a widow with a 14-year-old son who wants to go to medical school. I can make $2,100 a year and still receive my Social Security widow's benefits. But this isn't enough money to build up a college fund.

Is there any way I can work full time and have most of my income deferred until my son goes to college?

This would allow me to live on my Social Security benefits now while I build up a fund with my job income. — D. R., Garland, Texas.

A — There's no easy way to have income deferred for Social Security or other tax purposes. It's possible to get some income deferred through employee profit-sharing plans offered by some employers but these are hard to find and only a small percentage of your income can be deferred.

One way out is to have your son enroll in a community college that offers a work-study program. In these programs, students work in the community for pay and get college credit for it. The work is designed to blend in with their studies.

Ask your local board of education or your state board for the names and addresses of community colleges in your area. After two years your son can transfer to a four-year university to prepare for med school.

Q — I bought a bag of candy that was closed with staples.

TAKE NOTE: Any youth who plans to travel abroad this summer should get a new booklet, "Youth Travel Abroad," published by the U.S. State Department. It contains a checklist of information on how to get a passport, foreign visas and an international driver's license.

A — The Food and Drug Administration has no regulations that prohibit packaging with staples. If one of the staples was inside the package before you opened it, then the candy could be considered "adulterated" food.

If enough people complain about this kind of shoddy packaging, maybe the FDA will take action. Any time you find such dangerous foreign matter in a package, bring it to the attention of your local board of health. Ask the board to report it to the FDA.

EVEN IF YOU HAVEN'T LOST ANYTHING IT'S FUN TO READ THE "LOST & FOUND" TURN THERE NOW the staples must have fallen inside because it ended up in my mouth. Doesn't the government prohibit this kind of dangerous packaging? — Mrs. C. S. Odlin, Minn.

It also has an excellent chapter on "Avoiding Hassles." The biggest hassle is getting caught with drugs or purchasing drugs. Penalties in some foreign countries range from six years in a "primitive" prison to death.

The booklet also has an excellent bibliography for further information. You can get a copy by sending 20 cents to: Consumer Product Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

perfectly hardy and used for wintering over and for summer or fall crop.

If you thin the plants it multiplies to several stalks per plant. If you eat bunching onions in spring, harvest them before seed stalks form.

WRAPPING ON TREES: How long should you leave the wrapping on newly transplanted trees?

We think it's a good idea to leave the wrapping on for 2 or 3 years. A good tree-wrapping paper prevents insect borers and other bark problems.

Most landscape people wrap the trunk from the top down, overlapping as you go along, to just under the soil line.

CONTROLLING COCKROACHES: Here's a good, home formula for exterminating cockroaches, sent to us by a reader:

It's non-poisonous, destroys cockroaches, waterbugs and similar insects. Thoroughly mix 9 ounces of borax, 2 1/2 ounces cornstarch, 2 ounces of plaster of paris and 1 1/2 ounces of cocoa. Sprinkle freely around their haunts. Continue using for several days after the bugs have disappeared.

"Our son brought some cockroaches home with him from Hawaii, but this formula took care of them!"

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: F. R. of Twin Falls: "Last spring I took your advice and started our vegetables and other plants in the Jiffy pellets. I wasn't too happy the way some turned out."

"I found that the nylon netting which was wrapped around the peat was too strong and the roots had a hard time breaking through. Did you ever experience this?"

Yes, this is one of the disadvantages of the Jiffy pellet pots. The nylon mesh is too strong. However, you can do what we've done at planting time — take a razor blade and slice the nylon netting. Let the ball of roots out of the mesh and plant.

"There's still time to sow a row of onion seeds now for fall "scallions" or use next spring. If you sowed seed in spring, you'd be enjoying nice green "bunching" or scallions now.

If you sow them now, you'll have some by fall, or next spring. Southport White Bunching is a good variety to sow. A packet of seed will sow about 25 feet of row. Sow seed thickly, so they touch one another.

Japanese Bunching is recommended for hardy green scallions. It does not form a bulb but makes long, slim scallions of good quality. It is

In fact, I just heard through a horticultural salesman that these pellets are now perfected to the point where they have no netting, eliminating the problem completely.

As soon as we get more information on this, we'll try the new pellets in our greenhouse and pass what we've learned on to you.

An owner of a small hobby greenhouse tells us he starts his melons, cucumbers, watermelons, squash, peppers, eggplants and tomatoes in peat pots in his greenhouse, three or four weeks ahead of ordinary planting time outdoors. Then he plants them in his garden over black plastic sheets.

The potted plants hit the early market and he picks up between $75 to $100 by selling his produce in his yard. Next year he plans to increase his operation and we wager before he gets through, he'll be growing produce on a large scale.

Great oaks grow from little acorns, and this is how many a business got started.

C. H. of Murphy: "Can one of your readers help me? I want to make 'half-ripe' cucumber pickles but don't know how."

HOW TO HURRY TOMATOES

Some readers tell us their tomato plants have huge stalks with lots of leaves and green fruit. Can you hasten ripening by removing some foliage?

Removing some of the foliage might hasten maturity 3 or 4 days. Ripening and coloring of tomatoes depends upon fruit temperature, NOT LIGHT.

Removing some of the foliage allows more direct sunshine to reach the fruit, raises the temperature and thus hastens maturity. If your plants are all bush and with lots of green fruit, I'd try removing some foliage.

Once a tomato has reached the "mature green" stage (full development except for red color) the most desirable color develops at temperatures from 75 to 80 degrees.

Putting green tomatoes in a bright window does NOT hasten coloring, since light has little effect on ripening.

Here are some advantages of removing foliage from tomato vines:

1. Picking is easier and faster if some of the foliage is removed to expose the fruits.

2. Fruits and soil under the vines may dry off faster in mornings or after rains, thus reducing the development of mold and mold.

3. The amount of cracking may be reduced (although some maintain it has no effect).

DISADVANTAGES OF DEFOILATION:

1. Exposed fruits may sunburn if a hot spell follows treatment.

2. More fruits will be exposed to damage by early light frosts that normally would not harm fruits protected by leaves.

3. Defoliation might cause an increase in anthracnose on the fruits.

Tourists flock to view ruins at Wounded Knee

(c) New York Times Service

WOUNDED KNEE, S. D. The tourists come by the hundreds every day to stare at the ruins of Wounded Knee, trying to catch some hint of the 71-day-long springtime battle between Indians and federal marshals.

Most of them seem surprised that there is so little to see. There are no bloodstains, and no sign of the tens of thousands of shots exchanged between the Indians and federal marshals between late February and early May.

A fallen roof covers the ashes of the Wounded Knee Museum, the trading post and the post office. The foundation of the destroyed church whose picture adorns a government anti-pollution poster is very small. Debris has long since been cleared away.

The tourist drop beer cans into the church basement, flip cigarette butts into the wild sunflower, tramp into the graveyard to see who is buried in a fresh grave, and then get into their cars and drive down Big Foot Trail.

Although the visible scars of the Wounded Knee confrontation are fading, the emotions still are high.

On the Pine Ridge Reservation the tribal home of the Oglala Sioux, Indian still fights Indian over whether the takeover of Wounded Knee by the American Indian Movement was a proper protest. There has been one death and several injuries since the fighting stopped.

The traditionalists are still in tight lipped opposition to AIM. Many of the young Indians still support it. And all are of the feeling that AIM is not finished with Wounded Knee, that it is to maintain its militancy and keep its support, it cannot be idle.

"It makes sense that AIM would pick Pine Ridge," said Judith Cornelius, who herself is fiercely anti-AIM. "To be an Oglala Sioux is to be the epitome of Indianness."

Proud and beautiful with flashing black eyes, Miss Cornelius — who is part white and part Oneida Indian — is editor of the Oglala newspaper and her slashing words are more feared by AIM than are the marshals' bullets. She is 28 years old and dismissed AIM demands as contemptuous whines for government handouts.

While Miss Cornelius was driving with a visitor through the cottonwood groves recently on the Pine Ridge Reservation, AIM leaders were only 70 miles away, meditating at a sun dance.

The Sun Dance is one of the most sacred Indian religious ceremonies — the strongest "medicine" of the plains Indians.

The dance has been delayed to allow AIM leaders to come to South Dakota from a national convention held last week in northeast Oklahoma.

The sun dance has overtones of crucifixion and maypole rites.

Until 75 years ago when it was first banned by the federal government — the sun dance was a solemn, purification ceremony.

The dancers — all male — pierced their chest muscles with animal bones or charcoal sticks and tied them to leather straps leading from a center pole. In time with throbbing drums, the dancers would prance to and fro from the center pole, leaning against the leather straps, staring at the sun until their muscles were torn or their bones were splintered.

Minority hiring planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department today imposed minority hiring requirements on the construction industry in the Camden, N. J., area after contractors, unions and black groups failed to come up with their own voluntary plan.

Camden became the sixth city to have a mandatory plan imposed by the government in an effort to get more Negroes and other minority workers jobs in the construction industry.

Plans were imposed previously on Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, St. Louis and San Francisco. A federal court ordered a plan into effect in Seattle and voluntary plans were developed in 57 other cities.

The Camden plan sets minimum minority hiring goals for contractors and subcontractors holding contracts of more than $10,000 on any federally involved construction project valued in excess of $500,000.

Failure to meet the goals, which some labor leaders have denounced as illegal quotas, could subject contractors to debarment from future federal contracts.

The Labor Department's first year goals require federal contractors "to make a good faith effort" to raise minority employment by next June 30 to levels ranging from 2.1 to 4.2 per cent for plumbers, pipefitters and roofers to 11.2 to 13.4 per cent for bricklayers.

In the fourth and final year of the plan, the goals range from 8.4 to 10.5 per cent for plumbers, pipefitters and roofers to 17.8 to 20 per cent for bricklayers and 16 to 20 per cent for glaziers.

Other trades covered by the plan are asbestos workers, boilermakers, carpenters, cement masons, electricians, elevator constructors, fitters, operating engineers, painters and paperhangers, plasterers, sheet metal workers, sprinkler fitters, structural metal workers and wharf and dock builders.

Nicklaus near

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus muscled his way through the pack with a three-under-par 68 Saturday to grab a one-stroke third round lead in the PGA and move within a day of becoming golf's all-time top winner of major championships.

The redoubtable Golden Bear, already established as the game's all-time top money-winner with $1.9 million in a dozen years on the tour, ignited his surge to the top when he powered onto the green at the 535-yard ninth hole in two shots and two-putted for a birdie.

From there, Nicklaus went on to birdie four of six holes to pass the faltering longshot 36-hole co-leaders, Mason Rudolph and Don Iverson.

Nicklaus' 54-hole total over the hilly and tree-lined Canterbury Golf Club was 208, five under par.

Rudolph, the cigar-smoking, graying veteran who once made a Ryder Cup team but hasn't won a tournament for three years, and Iverson, an obscure 27-year-old Wisconsin pro whose only victory in three years was a satellite event, were at 209. They both shot one-under-par 70's Saturday.

For Nicklaus, getting past the third round with the lead put him in the position he has been waiting for since he U.S. Open in June 1977.

That was the 13th championship of his career, tying him with the late Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, and five times he failed to get No. 1. He sabotaged a the Masters in 1975 and 1976, and U.S. and British Opens in 1974 and 1975, respectively.

Three players in the down field of 76 tied Nicklaus' record of 67 Saturday, but none of them came up with his 208. Afternoon rain and sunny again when the tournament finished—and the best of them was Denny Shute, 210.

Melodrama set for Wednesday

THE PUFFY FAMILY, above, are the "good guys" in the Antique Festival Theatre's production, "Streets of New York" scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. Portraying Mr. Puffy, Mrs. Puffy and Dan Puffy are, from left, Jeff Mondeau, Jamestown, Colo.; Mrs. Puffy, Patricia (Bitsy) Sidwell, Littleton, Colo., and James Margolin, Van Nuys, Calif. The melodrama, with a gay 90's setting, is a benefit performance sponsored by the Twin Falls Mental Health Association. Proceeds will be used to help support two Vista workers in Twin Falls.

More court battle on name issue

IRS ends special group

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The issue of whether or not Sen. George McGovern's name appears, or ever did appear, on the birth certificate of an illegitimate child born in Fort Wayne during the 1940s may be headed again to court.

The Indiana State Board of Health refused to honor an Allen Circuit Court order Thursday which authorized the records be opened to provide a "full, true and exact copy" of the certificate alleged to list McGovern as the father of an illegitimate child.

Start work as you wish

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD — PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Do you feel guilty when you arrive at your job five minutes late?

Well, you probably should.

Unless you work for Hewlett-Packard. There, a "sliding" hours system is in effect, allowing workers to start at any time of their choosing during a two-hour period.

An employee may start work between 6:30 and 8:30 a.m. and leave between 3:15 and 5:15 p.m.

Hewlett-Packard, a giant electronics firm with about 22,000 workers worldwide, is believed to be the largest firm in the country to implement the unusual work schedule.

"The purpose of the program is to allow our people greater flexibility in arranging their personal schedules," said William R. Hewlett, the firm's president. "They can plan their workdays to gain more time for family leisure, conduct personal business or avoid traffic jams."

Hewlett said the flexible work schedule is being used at 15 of the firm's facilities in the United States, involving 15,000 employees.

The program was initiated on a trial basis at the company's plant in Boeblingen, Germany, in 1967 and made its American debut at the medical electronics division's plant at Waltham, Mass., in 1972.

The program has since spread to Hewlett-Packard plants in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Colorado and California.

The system has been used since February at the manufacturing division on the San Francisco peninsula where the company is headquartered.

"It's worked out best at the manufacturing plants. And would you believe that 70 per cent come in at 6:30 in the morning?" a company spokesman said.

You really notice it in the parking lot and during the drive home you get a jump on the rush hour."

Studies have shown that employees exceeded all shipment and production targets, according to the firm.

An employee opinion survey was taken and some of the typical comments included:

"Not being obligated to be here at a certain time really cuts down on the tension . . ."

"Getting home earlier allows me to get more things done including preparation of meals for my family . . . Early in the morning there are no school buses and even the police are not out that early . . . There are some restrictions. No employee may work alone, according to a company statement, because "the presence of another within sight or sound is mandatory" for safety reasons. And eight hours work is required every day—a worker can't put in, say, six hours one day and 10 the next.

Gander 'fathers' ducklings

GIBBONSVILLE — A male goose is acting as "father" to a mother duck and her brood of ducks at the Jack Wiscombe place here.

After the mother had hatched out seven young ones and had accepted eight from an incubator, the goose "took over."

Mrs. Wiscombe said the male goose began protecting the brood shortly after they were hatched and now three months later still won't let them around the other ducks.

"When the mother duck and her young were in a pen the male goose ran around the enclosure to keep the other ducks away," Mrs. Wiscombe said.

"Now the young ducks are as big as their mother but the goose still hasn't given up his protective role," she added.

On Aug. 25, 1884 the first telephone line in Oklahoma was put into operation between Ft. Reno and Darlington.

Food costs soar higher

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The retail cost of a family food market basket in the second quarter of this year rose to an annual rate of $1,497.6 per cent higher than the first quarter, and 15 per cent higher than a year ago, Agriculture Department economists said Friday.

The food specialists added in a report that consumers this fall can expect more price boosts from a combination of higher raw farm product prices and a pass-through of increased middlemen's charges.

On Sept. 12, the current freeze on beef prices is scheduled to end and packers and retailers will be allowed to pass along—as they already can on other foods—increases in live cattle costs. On that same date, the food middlemen will also be allowed to begin increases in their other costs, which have piled up since a price freeze went into effect June 13.

Adding all those factors together, 1973 retail food prices are expected to average 18 to 22 per cent above 1972, officials said.

The market basket report covered a period when meat prices were controlled, but before President Nixon's month-long freeze on all other foods went into effect.

The market basket cost does not represent the grocery bill for any actual or average real family. It covers the cost of farm-produced foods—excluding items like fish—for a statistically average household of 3.2 persons. However, changes in the cost of the basket do furnish an idea of how grocery bills for real families are rising.

According to the report, a quarterly summary of data issued earlier on a monthly basis, gross returns to farmers for foods in the market basket reached $665 in the second quarter this year, up 8 per cent from the preceding quarter and 3 per cent above a year earlier. Middlemen's charges reached $832 for the second quarter, up 4.3 per cent from the previous quarter and 5.7 per cent from a year earlier. Increases in beef, pork, poultry and fresh fruits and vegetables accounted for most of the increase in second-quarter retail costs.

Jury rules against wife

New council

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new Gerontology Council at the University of Cincinnati in Ohio will deal with the aging process through research and teaching.

Under the unit, graduate and undergraduate courses for credit and audit will be in gerontology. The council will work with a number of community groups which deal with activities of the elderly.

DETROIT (UPI) — In a rare case, a jury of five women and one man has thrown out a woman's $100,000 damage suit against her husband.

The woman, Dolores J. Hunt of Taylor, sued her husband, Malcolm, over a 1971 golfing mishap in which Hunt accidentally hit her on the head with a golf club, causing her to lose the sight in her left eye.

The jury returned a verdict of no cause for action. The meant the jury thought both parties were negligent in the golfing incident. The couple had told the jury different versions of how the accident happened.

Although she is unhappy with the verdict, Mrs. Hunt said she and her husband are still "harmoniously married." They have been married 22 years and have two children.

Hunt had no comment on the case, but his attorney said "he felt she was entitled to her day in court."

Six girls seek Cassia queen title

BURLEY — Six young women will be feted and rated during the annual Cassia County Fair and Rodeo queen's breakfast Monday morning at the Ramada Inn.

The six women, competing for the 1974 rodeo queen crown, will be judged on personality and appearance by the judges at the breakfast, where they will be asked to answer one general and one current events question.

The women will model and visit with the judges during the no-host, reservation breakfast.

Last Wednesday, Cindy Bolen, Heyburn, top rodeo contender in the area, instructed the contestants in goat-tying methods, which they will have to perform each night at the rodeo this week.

The contestants also practiced riding patterns which they will have to present at a horsemanship contest Wednesday morning, both on their own horses and on an unfamiliar horse. The contest is open to the public.

Hoggan's Leather and Canvas has donated a saddle to the fair board this year for presentation to the new queen, who will be crowned at the rodeo Saturday night.

This year's reigning rodeo queen, Charlyce Bench, 21, Oakley, will crown the new queen.

Miss Bench is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bench, Oakley, and has been working in Burley at Dr. Paul Brown's office for the past year. Sponsored by the Oakley Vigilantes, she represented Cassia County in the Idaho State Rodeo queen, contest last September and participated in the Rupert Fourth of July parade and the Oakley Pioneer Day's parade this year.

Carolyn Hurst, 18, Declo, is being sponsored by the Declo Kiwanis in the queen contest this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hurst, Declo, and has attended Brigham Young University for a year.

Melodi Walker, 18, Burley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reed Walker, Burley, is being sponsored in the contest by the Burley Lions. Miss Walker graduated from Burley High School this spring and plans to attend Brigham Young University this fall.

Terri Morley, 18, Burley, is a graduate of Burley High School and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stib Morley, Burley. She is sponsored in the contest by the Burley Kiwanis.

Lorri Elquist, 18, Oakley, graduated from Oakley High School this year and plans to attend Brigham Young University this fall. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallan Elquist, Oakley, she is sponsored in the contest by the Oakley Vigilantes.

Helen Parke, 18, Malta, is being sponsored by the Malta Lions. Miss Parke graduated from Raft River High School this spring and has been active in high school rodeo contests. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Parke, Malta.

Joan Nelson, 18, Jackson area resident, graduated from Minico High School this spring and plans to attend Ricks College this fall. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Nelson and is being sponsored by the Declo Lions.

S. Hills fire declared out

TWIN FALLS — A 6,500 acre range fire south of Twin Falls was brought under control about 6 p.m. Friday according to Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service officials.

The fire, which started about 9:30 p.m. Thursday, was apparently caused by lightning and burned 350 acres of privately owned land as well as land belonging to the Sawtooth National Forest and the BLM.

About 250 men from the Forest Service and BLM teams battled the fire which began in North Cottonwood Creek, about 12 miles south of Twin Falls, then headed eastward to McMillan Creek and extended west approximately two miles from Cottonwood Creek.

Five lightning caused fires in the Shoshone BLM District Thursday were reported out at noon Friday, according to Mike Green, district information officer. About 4,670 acres burned in the five fires.

Hearings held

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, the leadoff witness at the hearings, told the subcommittee that with geothermal production facilities, "our state may well remain an energy exporter and therefore assist in some measure the energy demands that are upon our nation."

Andrus told the subcommittee Idaho was uniquely situated to provide a location for research into the geothermal field. He noted a recent study that had identified over 400 thermal wells, and set aside 25 areas that warrant further study. He also told the subcommittee, in response to a question, that the State Land Board was drawing up regulations to permit leases of geothermal resources on land within the state. He said requests for leases on about 800,000 acres had been received, and the regulation that will govern them are expected to be completed in 30-45 days.

But he said the 1972 Idaho Geothermal Resources Act, passed by the state legislature, declared geothermal resources to be separate from either water or mineral resources. He said care would be taken to prevent waste or damage to the environment from the development of these resources.

Idaho State Sen. John Peavey, R-Rupert, told the subcommittee the federal National Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 should be amended because it establishes geothermal resources as mineral. He termed the Idaho legislation "far more reasonable" in its approach to that problem.

The hearings followed a helicopter tour by the Congressional delegation, the governor and AEC officials of eastern Idaho, including the NRTS and Craters of the Moon National Monument. The group touched down in southern Cassia County, at a "known geothermal resource area." Visiting the Bridge farm of Mrs. Harriet Crank, 12 miles south of Malta, the group saw greenhouses that utilize heat taken from natural hot water from a nearby well to grow tomatoes and flowers.

The group also heard a consultant to the Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative explain the potential for geothermal resources in the area.

Burley man, 29, facing charge

BURLEY — John Cocklin, 29, Burley, has been charged with assault with intent to commit murder in connection with a shooting early Saturday in Burley.

According to Cassia County prosecuting attorney Gordon Nielson, Cocklin allegedly shot his ex-wife, Joanne Cocklin, Burley, and Dale Wood, Burley, who was visiting Mrs. Cocklin, with a .22 magnum revolver in a Burley home about 2 a.m. Saturday.

Only one shot was fired striking them both in the neck according to Nielson. Mrs. Cocklin was treated and released at Cassia Memorial Hospital. Wood was admitted to the hospital where his condition Saturday was listed as improved.

Burley police officers apprehended Cocklin at the scene of the shooting and he is currently being held in the Burley City jail on $5,000 bond.

He will be arraigned before the magistrate judge Monday morning.

Council to meet

SHOSHONE — A recessed meeting of the Shoshone City Council will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the city hall. Councilmen will consider a request, among other things, issued by city employees for an immediate increase in salaries.

Rupert man named

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — Buster Goode of Goode Motors in Rupert, Idaho, is the new president of the Idaho Automobile Dealers Association, selected during a recent meeting here.

Elected vice president was Jack T. Crollard of Crollard Ford Sales, Inc., Coeur d'Alene. Robert M. Henderliser, Boise, is executive vice president.

More than 200 auto dealers and industry representatives attended the 39th annual convention.

Only one-third of child support help paid

He attributed the problem of widespread flagrant violation of child support not to the inability of the courts to punish, but to rapidly changing social values.

"This is a big socio-economic situation which has developed during the last 30 years," the judge maintained.

Men, often married and divorced several times, have become "good breeders" but "not good providers," he said.

Often, men who have another family are brought to court for not paying the support money.

"A fellow only earns a limited amount of money — how many households can he support? This is the question that is bounced to the court and the court says, 'Uh — I don't know.' The judge is expected to perform the magic of dividing up a limited amount among a few families, and I'm no magician," the judge said.

He maintained that not punishment by the law, but critical judgement by peers, restoration of traditional values and instillation of sense of shame in negligent fathers are the solutions to the child support problem.

Whatever the root remedy, most women rely upon the judicial system to enforce payments. When a woman finds that she is not receiving the $50 per child per month support which is most commonly awarded by the court, she may file a complaint at the county prosecutor's office.

If the father is living in the county, he is generally called to the prosecutor's office within the week to make an out-of-court agreement to pay.

If he does not appear, a court-order to show cause for not paying the support is obtained, according to county prosecutor Galley.

In court the judge may lower the amount of money the former husband has to pay. Or, he may find the man in contempt of court and give him chance to purge himself by beginning to pay again, Galley said.

Galley said that if the man has moved, records are sent to the county he lives in. Whether or not the man will be prosecuted in the other state varies on location. "Some states are very good, and some states are very poor in enforcement," Galley said.

According to the Twin Falls judge, if the fellow is inclined to move around it is practically "impossible" to do anything."

In a typical case, a woman, who has pressed child support during the past three years, found that working through the courts did little good.

When divorced 10 years ago, she was awarded $90 a month to help raise three children.

"I waited and waited and never did get any money ... I kept thinking, 'If I ever need it he'd help me out,'" she said. "One summer the kids went out to visit him in Oregon. One child came back with hepatitis."

"I called and asked him to send me some money to help pay the doctor bills ... He said he'd send me what he could, which turned out to be nothing. Then, I decided to go to the prosecutor."

She said that the judge in Oregon reduced the amount of child support her former husband was to pay and about three months after her initial complaint, she received a few sporadic payments.

She returned to the prosecuting attorney to complain about the infrequency of the payments, but money continued to come in only sporadically.

"I guess they got on to him, but they never make it rough enough that he worries that much," the Twin Falls woman said.

She added that she has been able to get by because she has always worked but that "lately it's getting harder" as the kids get older it gets more expensive."

For three years Doris McCord, Twin Falls, did not file a complaint against her non-paying former husband because she did not realize that she could bring the issue to court.

"I used to call and ask him. If he had the money, sometimes he made good," Mrs. McCord said.

Last fall she filed a complaint against her former husband living in Idaho Falls to receive the support for their four children. "Even through court, I found it didn't do any good," she said.

Mrs. McCord claimed that he then sent checks, infrequently but that many of them bounced.

She wrote to District Court Judge Henry Martin in Idaho Falls who had handled the case. Martin responded that she would have to work through a lawyer.

"How can I do that when it costs $25 everytime you call a lawyer?" Mrs. McCord said. She did not know whether she could work with the prosecuting attorney in Idaho Falls. She added, "What good will it do if the court won't put him in jail?"

"Women are lucky that they get the children, but then men don't pay and it's not fair," she said.

"I really haven't had any problems because I have a fairly nice job. But I feel my kids deserve the $40," Mrs. McCord concluded.

Many women without means of support turn to welfare.

"The usual situation is the gal is behind in just about everything. She has put it off (accepting child support from the government) until there's just about no other way to go," Theo Murdock, supervisor of eligibility at the Idaho Department of Environmental and Community Services (DECS) said.

Murdock said that the average applicant, usually in her early twenties, has stayed with her mother for most of her stay.

Geothermal study eyed

BRIDGE — The federal government could spend as much as $200,000 in the next several months in surveying the geothermal resources of this area in southern Cassia County.

Dr. Gerald Johnson, Director of the Division of Applied Technology of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, who visited a hothouse run from geothermal resources here Friday, said efforts would be made with the money to undertake a geophysical study to test the suitability of the area for further development.

The site, he said, "would lend itself to a wide variety of things." Johnson said current thinking at the national level called for the development of three or four national demonstration centers for research into geothermal energy. Geothermal energy is obtained from the natural hot water, steam or heat of the earth's subsurface.

Testifying before the Congressional subcommittee looking into geothermal resources in Idaho Falls Friday, Johnson said he hoped to have one or two demonstration plants operating within the next five years.

Johnson said in an interview Friday the funds for the geophysical work have been appropriated by Congress but have not yet been released to the AEC. Between $100,000 and $200,000 would go to studying this area.

While testifying to a congressional subcommittee earlier in the day, he said in response to a question from Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, that the drilling of an experimental geothermal well would require an environmental impact study. In response to McClure's observations that such studies often consume up to 15 months, Johnson said he hoped the one for this area, if necessary, wouldn't require that much time.

Noting that work going on in Los Alamos, N.M., was concerned with so-called "hot rocks" research, Johnson said he considered the Bridge area of the Raft River valley a "kind of Northwest development station for special water and temperature ranges."

A study published by the United States Geological Service and the Idaho Department of Water Administration last spring lists the lower Raft River valley as a "Known Geothermal Resource Area."

A November, 1971, publication of the University of Idaho, "Geothermal Potential of Idaho," says, "Southern Raft River valley seems to be one of the most likely places to drill for steam in the entire state of Idaho."

Tour site

SEN. Frank Church, D-Idaho, inspects a well in the Bridge area of southern Idaho, classified as a known geothermal area. Looking on are Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, left; Edwin Schleifer of the Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative and Dr. Gerald Johnson of the Atomic Energy Commission.

her apartment without paying rent or has resorted to some other desperate means to survive with her children without money.

To receive aid to dependant children (ADC) the family must be needy and the mother must sign a limited power of attorney allowing DECS to attempt to collect the support money which it will be paying.

"As long as she is receiving assistance, we have the right and responsibility to pursue the absent father and we do," Murdock said.

This May, Murdock added, in Twin Falls County $64,719 ADC money was given to support 949 children and 366 eligible caretakers. On the average that is nearly $50 per month for each child and caretaker, he said.

Making a conservative estimate, Murdock said that the DECS could collect $35,000 from fathers who should be paying support, but are not. This would total more than one half the ADC money given Twin Falls mothers by the state government.

Tate Cartly, an assistant to the state's attorney general, said that his office handles child support cases when the mother is receiving public assistance and when the county prosecuting attorney does not handle it.

"We try to make him voluntarily pay. If he doesn't, then we take him to court," Cartly said describing how his office tries to get back some of the ADC money.

Cartly estimated that his office, which has been operating since January, collects $8,000 a month in an eight county area in Idaho and he expects soon to be collecting $10,000 each month.

"I try to keep regular, voluntary child support. If he (the father) pays regular, that would be a force to help her get off welfare," Cartly concluded. He said that coupled with child support a woman would be able to maintain her family even with a low paying job.

Current Cues

By HELEN WALKER.

TWIN FALLS — Success in home canning is assured if the homemaker will read, understand and follow reliable rules.

Causes of food spoilage are caused by faulty seals, underprocessing and improper handling. These can be avoided by following recommended procedures. Your time, labor and money are wasted if you permit the food to spoil.

Some common causes of sealing failure are:

Failing to read and follow instructions for using caps and lids.

Leaving the wrong amount of head space when filling jars; 1 inch head space for low-acid foods such as meats, green beans, beets, etc.; one-half inch for acid foods — fruits and tomatoes; one-fourth-inch for pickles, relishes, juices to be processed and one-eighth inch for jellies, pickles and relishes which are sealed boiling hot but not processed.

Not taking time to "knife out" air bubbles before sealing the jar; particles of food, seeds, seasonings, etc., on the top of the jar.

Screwing the band either too tight or not tight enough — tighten bands comfortably tight so the sealing compound will hold tight against the top of the jar but not enough to buckle the lid.

Inadequate heat to seal. Re-using jars or lids from commercial canned products.

Instead of those designed for home canning:

Food spoilage from underprocessing is the usual cause of a broken seal. Food spoilage may occur anytime from one day to many months.

There are only two recommended canning methods: pressure cooker for beans, beets, corn, meats, fish, poultry and all low-acid foods. The water-bath method for processing fruits, tomatoes and other acid foods.

For good results:

Use only fresh, clean healthy produce and thoroughly clean jars.

Use recommended procedures and follow directions.

Process for the proper amount of time, making the necessary altitude adjustments.

Discard faulty jars, lids and rings.

Test seal and if the jar fails to seal, reprocess, using a new lid.

Store in cool, dry place and avoid unnecessary handling.

Mail questions to Helen Walker, home service representative, Idaho Power Co., P. O. Box 8, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

TWIN FALLS — Kathy L. Brown and Michael G. Scott were married in July 28 rites in the Immanuel Lutheran Church, Twin Falls.

Bud Rountree, Boise, was best man. Ushers were Kurt Flinn, Boise, and Butch Brown, brother of the bride.

Debbie Bronson was organist. Ellen Wickhorst registered guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn F. Brown, Nampa, Colo., and the bridegroom is the son of Ralph E. Scott, Hazelton.

Rev. Donald Winterrowd, Twin Falls, conducted the double ring ceremony before a setting of baskets of orange gladioli and yellow chrysanthemums.

The bride wore a gown of dotted Swiss over taffeta with a high ruffled neckline, long puffed sleeves and a ruffled hem. She was given in marriage by her father.

Her floor length veil was trimmed with lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow and orange pom pom daisies, yellow rosebuds and yellow baby's breath.

Her jewelry included earrings borrowed from Mrs. C. W. Hatch, a cameo bracelet worn by her mother and by her maternal grandmother at their weddings.

Faye Hatch, Twin Falls, was maid of honor. Chris Smith, Hailey, and Doris Brown, sister-in-law of the bride, were bridesmaids.

The bridegroom's parents were hosts for a rehearsal dinner given at their home.

The bride was honored at a canned food shower given by Gay Hatch and Doris Brown.

Miners enter North Star portal

Gem's historic Triumph Mine reopens with 2 shifts daily

By TERRY CAMPBELL

Times-News Writer

TRIUMPH — Jack leg drills are again humming and air-trammer ore cars are traveling the track at the historic Triumph Mine, East Fork.

A project to partially reopen the mine — focusing on the North Star area — was initiated this spring by the Triumph Mineral Co. Inc. The private company consists of area residents and stockholders, who, for the most part, have had prior mining experience.

During its nearly century-long career, the Triumph was the largest lead and silver mine in Southern Idaho and was believed to be, at one point of its career, the second largest silver producer in the United States.

In addition to silver and lead, the mine has also produced zinc and some gold. According to company president Rupert House, Triumph, the company has obtained a lease and option to buy 52 claims, comprising about 890 acres, from the mine owner Triumph Mining Co.

The project presently employs two men per shift and runs two shifts a day.

House said that since this spring a shop — serving as a combined compressor and change room — has been constructed; about 300 feet of the "Boiler" tunnel has been rehabilitated and about 350 additional feet have been driven; and ore car track has been installed at the mine dump.

Plans call for driving about several hundred feet more of tunnel to hopefully develop an upward extension of a vein and to realize ore production.

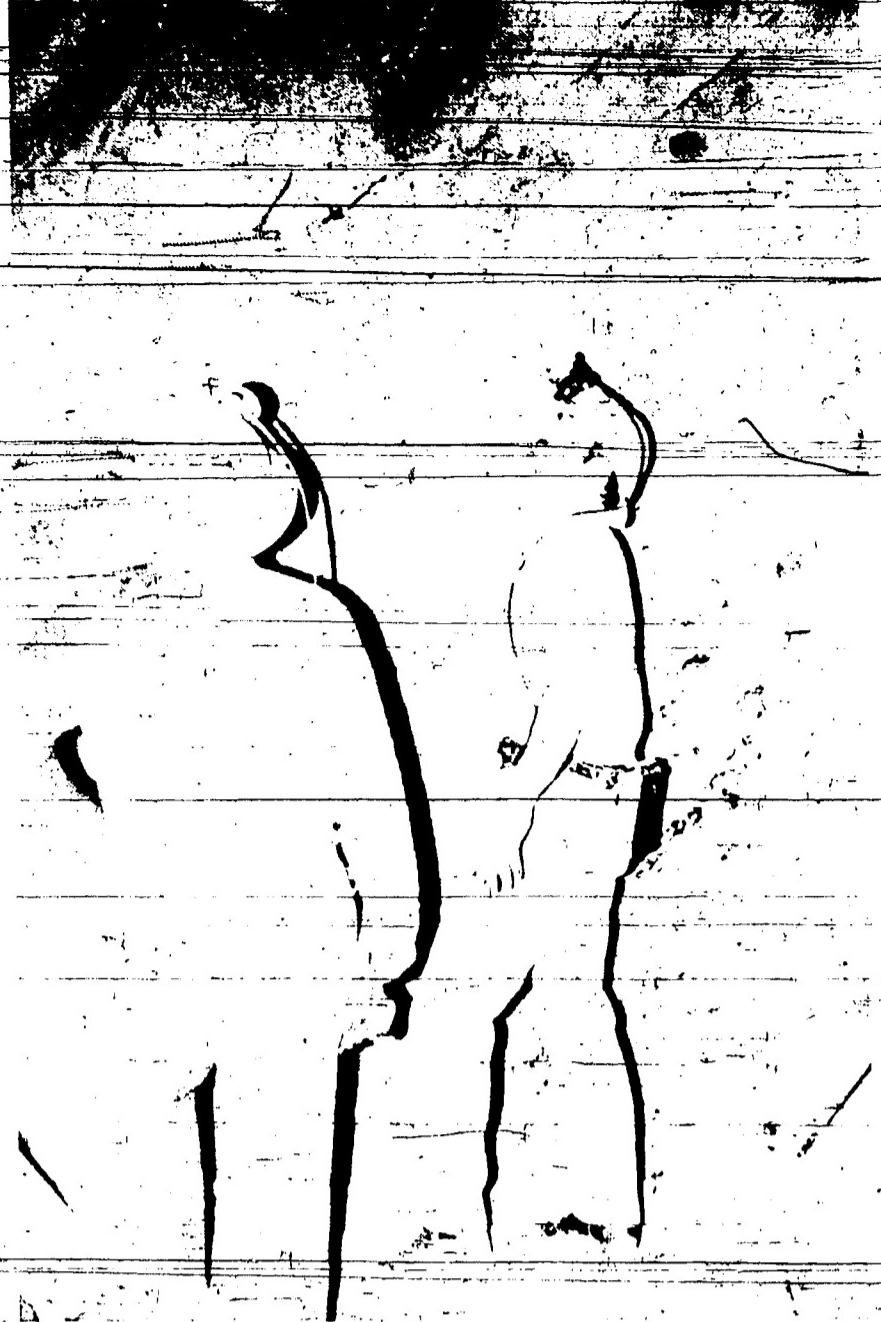

The Triumph was closed in June, 1957, with abandonment caused primarily by low metal prices and transportation costs to serve about 52 miles of workings.

Company officials, in addition to House, who was employed at the Triumph for about 20 years and was serving as underground foreman when it closed, include vice-president, Betty Laverty, Ketchum; and directors, A. W. Ensign Jr., and accountant, Hailey; Guy V. Jones, geologist, Bellevue; Arthur "Bus" House, formerly of Hailey, presently of Oakdale, Calif.; and Ed Laverty, Ketchum.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think me foolish, but I am a 55-year-old woman (widowed nine years) and I have fallen in love for the first time in my life. [My mother picked out my first husband; and my one regret was that SHE never had to live with him.]

This man I love [I'll call him Bob] was separated from his wife when we met. He says he loves me and I believe him, but he keeps going back to his wife. He is 58, but his physical condition is like a 30-year-old.

Right now Bob says he is definitely going to file for a divorce. I asked him when, and he said, "Not until Nov. 19, because our 25th wedding anniversary is Nov. 18th, and I don't want to slap her in the face before then."

He's her first love

What is wrong? I bend over backwards to please this man, but I must be doing something wrong because, after loving him for two years, I still don't have him.

A CONN. MESS

DEAR MESS: If you ever land Rob you will have a very considerate husband. Be patient until after his 25th wedding anniversary, and if he doesn't make the break then, come Thanksgiving, cook his goose.

DEAR ABBY: First of all, let me tell you that I have five children. My husband and I are getting a divorce and he can't help me, so I am going to have to raise these children alone. After my husband left, I found out I was pregnant. I am too far along now for an abortion.

I don't want this baby. Can I give it up for adoption? I have given this a lot of thought and have decided if I were to keep it, it wouldn't be fair to the five children I have, nor to the one that's on the way.

I believe every child should have two parents who really want it. Please don't give me a lecture. My mind is made up. Just tell me where to go to give it away.

NEEDS HELP NOW

DEAR NEEDS: No lectures from me. I agree, every child should have two parents who really want it. (Sometimes, one is enough.) Get in touch with your County Welfare Information Center. Also, ask your doctor for guidance. There are plenty of couples who desperately want a child.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single girl living in New York City. I have my own car and I am dating a guy who doesn't have a car. It takes about an hour and fifteen minutes from his house to mine using public transportation, but it's only 15 minutes by car.

I find myself in the position of picking him up and taking him home whenever we go out.

Compounding the problem is the fact that I must use the toll bridge to get to and from his house, which adds up considerably for me.

I find this a very difficult adjustment as I have been accustomed to having my dates pick me up and take me home. Should I continue this pickup and delivery service? He's not a native New Yorker, and is afraid to take the subway late at night.

Today's hand appeared in our column of June 25. We pointed out a way to make the hand but there is a better line of play and Ray Alexander of Winfield, Ala., has been the first to suggest it:

South ruffs the third club and draws trumps with three leads. Then he stops to get as good a count as he can.

West has shown up with seven clubs and three spades and three unknown red cards.

If they are all hearts no line of play will bring the contract home. If all three are diamonds and East's singleton is either the king or the queen then South can play the ace, drop that singleton and make his contract. If one is a heart and two are diamonds any line of play will work.

Now suppose that two are hearts and one a diamond, as is most likely. If the singleton diamond is the 10 South can make the hand by leading the jack from dummy. He can also make it if the singleton is the king or queen and East makes the mistake of covering the jack.

Mr. Alexander's play, which is the best, is to simply lead a low diamond after drawing trumps and to win the return in his own hand and run off the rest of the trumps.

If East started with exactly three diamonds he also held six hearts; is squeezed by the last trump lead and is forced to let South make the last trick with a low diamond or North to make it with the four or five of hearts.

Basic training slims Marine

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Pvt. Kyle L. Luttsma took longer than the average Marine recruit to complete his basic training, and for good reason.

When the 19-year-old Newaygo, Mich., resident walked into boot camp eight months ago he weighed 293 pounds. He will soon graduate from boot camp at a slender 171 pounds.

"I was determined to become a Marine and had no thoughts of dropping out," he said.

Pensive grandson

WASHINGTON (UPI) Devaluation of the U.S. dollar played a significant role in booming American farm product exports 60 per cent to a phenomenal new record of $12.9 billion in the 1972-73 fiscal year which ended June 30, an Agriculture Department report said Friday.

The report listed devaluation as one of three major factors in the export surge, along with expanding world food demand from more prosperous consumers and poor 1972 crops in many parts of the world.

Don Paarlberg, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, said in an interview the devaluation was part of a "new monetary situation" which had contributed to skyrocketing demand and prices for many U.S. products.

The devaluation itself strengthened foreign demand for American foods because it made them cheaper in terms of marks, yen and other currencies.

Paarlberg explained. But in addition, he said there has been a worldwide distrust of paper currencies among many investors.

This has produced a growing trend toward investment in gold, real estate and commodities, the economist said.

The Agriculture Department's report said exports of grains alone accounted for more than half the total increase in the value of exports in the 1972-73 season. Another fourth of the gain was accounted for soybeans. Among major commodities, there were export declines only for dairy products and vegetable oils. Others which showed increases included cattle fides, cotton, meats, tobacco, poultry products, fruits and nuts and vegetables.

A record $1.1 billion grain deal with the Soviet Union at the opening of the 1972-73 season last fall got nationwide attention. But the new report said nearly every foreign area took a record volume of U.S. farm products during the past year.

Shipments to Japan, for example, leaped to a record $2.3 billion for the year, an increase of $1.1 billion over the previous year as prosperous Japanese consumers reached for increasing supplies of American grains, soybeans, meats, cotton, hides, and fruits and vegetables. In addition, China emerged as a smaller but important market by taking over $200 million worth of U.S. farm products in 1972-73 and placing orders for what likely will be substantially more in the 1973-74 season.

Overall, economists indicated, actual shipments to Russia during 1972-73 amounted to $905 million compared with $135 million the previous year. This gain accounted for 16 per cent in the total increase in U.S. farm exports.

Researcher hired

TWIN FALLS, Dr. Carl C. Blickenstaff has been transferred to Twin Falls to conduct research on the control of sugarbeet, pea and bean insects for the Agricultural Research Service.

His most recent assignment was in Bozeman, Mont., where he was in charge of grasshopper research. His other research assignments with ARS since 1951 include corn insects in Iowa and Georgia, soybean insects in Missouri, alfalfa insects in Maryland, and tropical crop pests in Liberia, West Africa.

Both the doctor and his wife are Indiana natives and graduated from Purdue University. His advanced degrees were granted from Iowa State University. Her hobbies include gardening and weaving, while his hobbies include growing dwarf "bonsai" plants, canoeing, and camping.

They have purchased a home two miles south of Twin Falls on South Washington Street.

Feedlot exemptions cited

By PETER J. BERNSTEIN

(c) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — What do some two-million animal feedlots each containing fewer than 1,000 slaughter steers and heifers, 700 mature dairy cattle, 2,500 swine over 55 pounds, 10,000 sheep, 66,000 turkeys, 5,000 ducks, or 100,000 laying hens and broilers have in common?

The answer is an exemption from the cleanup provisions of the federal Water Pollution Control Act that has two Midwest congressmen madder than a couple of wet hens.

Reps. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., and Guy Vander Jagt, Michigan, in a sharply-worded letter to the Environmental Protection Agency, protested the agency's decision to exempt all but the biggest feedlot operations from a regulation requiring polluters of the nation's waterways to obtain discharge permits.

The Congressmen said that EPA, in granting the exemptions last month, has allowed feedlots which produced 42 per cent of the cattle marketed in 1971 to escape statutory requirements of the law.

And lest anyone minimize the pollution caused by farm feedlots consider the fact that, according to an EPA study two years ago, the national production of livestock manure exceeded 2 billion tons a year — equal in fact to the total quantity of coal mined or crude petroleum pumped annually in the United States.

The Council of Environmental Quality has said that feedlots, where animals are kept in close confinement prior to slaughter, are the predominant source of pollution in a number of Midwest rivers.

Reuss and Vander Jagt, chairman and ranking Republican respectively of the House Conservation and Natural Resources subcommittee, said the feedlot exemptions "are unlawful because they are based on an erroneous interpretation of law."

EPA, in making the exemptions, has said the administrative problems involved in processing more than two million discharge permits precludes its covering all feedlots. The agency said the pollution problems caused by most feedlots are relatively minor compared to the clerical problems that would result if all application forms for permits had to be reviewed.

"We find this contention novel and strained," Reuss and Vander Jagt said. "The law requires that dischargers from feedlots must obtain permits. It does not authorize EPA to include some (feedlots) and exempt others."

The Congressman charged that EPA, in permitting the exemptions, "ignored" recommendations of Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz that permits be required for feedlots having animal concentrations far lower than those proposed by EPA.

Beef sales told

TWIN FALLS — All classes sold $1 to $3 higher at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission Co. sale Wednesday.

What's What

L. M. Boyd

Bottle-fed babies are more apt to turn into fat grownups than breast-fed babies. Or so say medical researchers at England's Sheffield University. They checked out 260 infants at birth, then six weeks later. The bottle babies put on not just enough but too much weight. The breast babies didn't. These scholars say they're convinced that overfeeding at such an early age sets a pattern for later obesity.

How do you account for the fact that the settlers of Nebraska stayed on there? From 1856 to 1875 all of 19 years, they lost their crops to grasshoppers. Why did they stay? Phenomenal durability.

Bird watchers among people are nowhere nearly as adept as people watchers among birds, count on that. The birds can see eight times farther than the people.

Nine out of 10 brides who want children become expectant within 18 months after their weddings, research reveals.

QUOTER FROM CLIENT
Q "Who said, 'There ain't no man can avoid being born average'?"

A Satchel Paige. And he added: "But there ain't no man got to be common." Fine fellow, Paige.

Q "In which religions are the devout supposed to take off their shoes before they go into their houses of worship?"

A That's the rule for Mohammedans, Buddhists, Hindus, Shintoists, Confucians and Taoists.

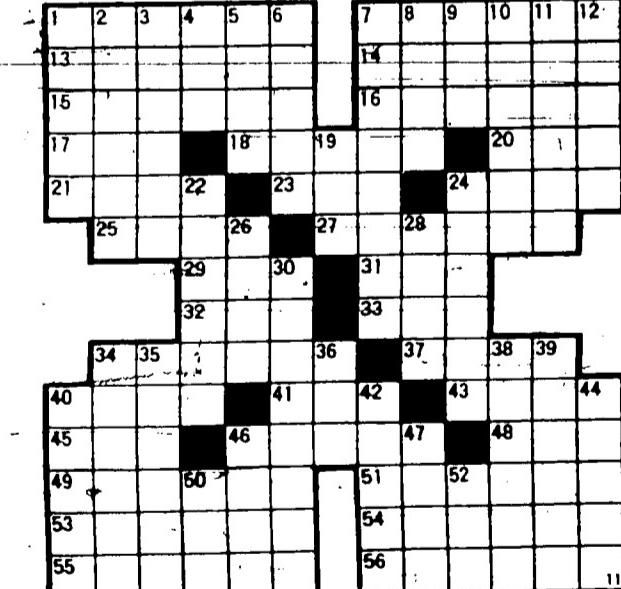

Am advised by a dental expert that one out of every five grownups has an impacted tooth that ought to be pulled. That word "alimony" traces back to the Latin phrase for "eating money." Please file the fact, too, that an ounce and a half of coal contains enough energy to pull a ton of rail freight about one mile. It's said 38 out of every 100 men when shopping for suits are accompanied by women. The midsection of a 40-pound dog can hold just about three times as much grub as that of a 160-pound man.

LOVE AND WAR
Love and marriage are like bacon and eggs, dandy together but not essential to each other. Wait, our Love and War man doesn't make that claim. It's the contention of a sociologist named Graham Spanier. After studying 109 couples, he's quoted as reporting "Romanticism appears to have little or no importance to matrimonial relationships." The bug thing, he says, is that the partnership be "free of conflict." An exceedingly elderly argument, thus. Still, our L and W man prefers the passion match to the convenience marriage. He also recommends the compulsive kiss and the spontaneous embrace.

Valley Weather Report

Continued fair and warm in valley

Twin Falls, northside, Burley-Rupert areas:

Fair and warm through Monday. Highs in mid-80s to lower 90s both days. Overnight lows in the 50s.

Camas Prairie, Hailey and lower Wood River Valley:

Fair and warm through

Monday with chance of widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms over the mountains. Highs in the 80s both days. Overnight lows in the 40s.

Synopsis:

A weak ridge of high pressure is again building over the intermountain area and should bring generally fair weather to Southern Idaho the next few days. There is enough moisture present for scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms over the mountains. Temperatures will continue warm, with highs in the mid-80s to mid-90s and the lows mostly in the 50s.

overnight lows in the mid-40s to low 60s. The extended outlook, Tuesday through Thursday, indicates continuation of dry, warm weather, with chance of widely scattered thunderstorms over the mountains. Highs will continue in the mid-80s to mid-90s and the lows mostly in the 50s.

Physicians licensed

BOISE (UPI) — The state Board of Medicine, during its summer session, licensed 47 physicians to practice medicine and surgery in Idaho. Dr. Ben E. Katz, Twin Falls, chairman, said Friday.

Fifty-one licenses were issued during the winter session of the board in January, making a total of 98 licenses in the Gem state during the last year.

In addition, the applications of 14 physician's assistants were approved and four physical therapists were registered.

TE woman to UF post

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Fred Harder has been appointed to serve as Personnel and Organization Chairman for the 1973 United Fund Campaign.

Mrs. Harder will be responsible for contacting community organizations to find volunteers for the campaign.

The purpose of the annual campaign is to raise money from local businesses and residents like the Red Cross, the YMCA and the Boy Scouts.

Those interested in helping the United Fund Campaign this fall should contact Mrs. Harder at 733-6119.

Book Bonus

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — Two major book collections on viticulture and enology have been given to the library of the University of California at Davis by Maynard A. Amerine, an authority on the cultural and technical aspects of the wine industry.

The gift consists of a collection of more than 2,000 books and documents in English and more than 1,000 in French and Italian.

MV native elected

BOISE — D. Michael Preston, Boise, has been elected a principal of JCB Engineers, Inc., according to Sumner M. Johnson, president, Nampa.

Preston, who has been with the engineering firm since January, 1968, is in charge of the land-development section for the company and is located in the Boise office. The firm also has offices in Nampa, Twin Falls, Ketchum and Pocatello.

A native of Hagerman, Preston earned his engineering degree from Brigham Young University. From 1965 to 1967, he was with Smith & Monroe Engineers of Boise, and for one-and-a-half years was assistant city engineer for the city of LaGrande, Ore.

A registered professional engineer, Preston is a member of the Idaho Society of Professional Engineers, the American Society of Civil Engineers and Consulting Engineer of Idaho.

He and his wife, Maria, have three children, Shane, II, Jade, and Leslie, 2.

TF electronics business to manufacture watches

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Devtronics, Inc., a Twin Falls electronics manufacturer announced this week a manufacturing agreement for assembly and packaging of solid-state digital watches.

The announcement was made by Richard Patterson, marketing manager, at a press conference Thursday in the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce offices.

The contract, with Cox Electronic Systems, Salt Lake City, Utah, will involve the manufacture of about 150,000 of the watches in the next two years, Patterson said.

Work on the watches will begin within 30 days, and is expected to require 10 new employees at the firm, and perhaps more than 25 additional employees by next spring, Patterson said.

Since Sept. 1971, Devtronics has been housed in the old Twin Falls water treatment plant building, where the company has spent about $10,000 on improvements. The purchase of the building when the corporation moved to Twin Falls from California was one of the advantages of moving to Idaho, Patterson said.

Owners of the concern are Hal Humphrey, president, general manager, and majority stockholder, and Joe Hackney, both Twin Falls, and Bill Nichols, Burley.

The company currently employs 60 assemblers and is now manufacturing nine electronic products, the most important of which is a hand calculator for a California company. The calculators are, Patterson said, a reasonably new thing, and a big market item for the future. About 50,000 have been manufactured in 6 models during the past seven months, he said.

Workers at the plant are asked to list their hobbies such as sewing, knitting and other work with small things. Such experience is useful when working on the assembly line, Patterson said. Employees need the ability to work with miniaturization and with parts in doing several jobs. Patterson also talked about future ideas of the corporation, including an electronic desk clock, an automobile clock "that will work," and a 40 part unit similar to an electronic slide rule. The company bid recently on a $1 million dollar deal, "a harness tied into seat belts and car door alarms," Patterson said.

Black publisher oversees fortune

By WALTER MORRISON

(c) Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — A 1933 trip to Chicago to see the century of progress exposition was the first step of John H. Johnson's journey to wealth and influence as America's top black publisher.

Today, Johnson presides over his Johnson Publishing Co. from plush offices on Michigan Ave.

The $7 million, 11-story building is the first in downtown Chicago designed and built for a black-owned company.

From his command post, Johnson, 55, oversees the fortunes of his five magazines — Ebony, Jet, Black Stars, Black World and the newest, Ebony Jr.

Picassos, Chagalls and Marinis decorate his apartment — actually it is two apartments made into one on Lake Shore Dr.

Johnson has eaten dinner at the White House more times, probably than many blacks in Chicago have had a cup of coffee with a local political leader.

He is the holder of numerous awards for achievement, including being selected in 1966 for the Spingarn Medal of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which is presented to a black American of outstanding achievement. He was named publisher of the year in 1972.

Johnson's success with Negro Digest, now called Black World, inspired him to create a new magazine. In November, 1945, he brought out Ebony, which was to be the most successful of his publications.

Johnson is keenly aware that the charge is sometimes made that Ebony, with its portrayal of rich, successful blacks, is "unrealistic and not reflective of the black experience."

"Whoever says that doesn't read the magazine," Johnson said.

Ebony, he said, has changed with changing times. "When we began, blacks were preoccupied with material things," he said. "Success was equated with big cars, fine homes, mink coats. Now success means something else."

"I have said that we are for whatever will secure the rights of black Americans, short of burning down our cities and killing people, and I don't know how we could be more militant," he declared.

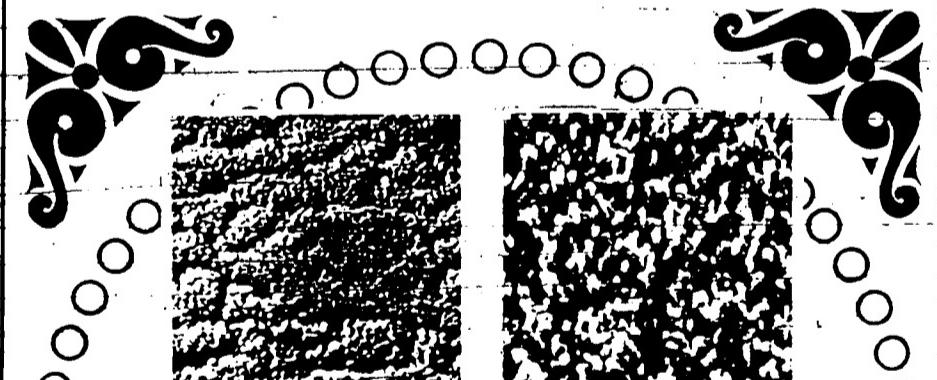

Ebony, he said, was the first national magazine to deal with Stokely Carmichael, the shouting black power militant of the 1960s.

Reminding You To Save On a New Car from Us During 1973 Plymouth Clearance

Simply speaking we're selling our remaining stock of Plymouths at year-end prices and trades.

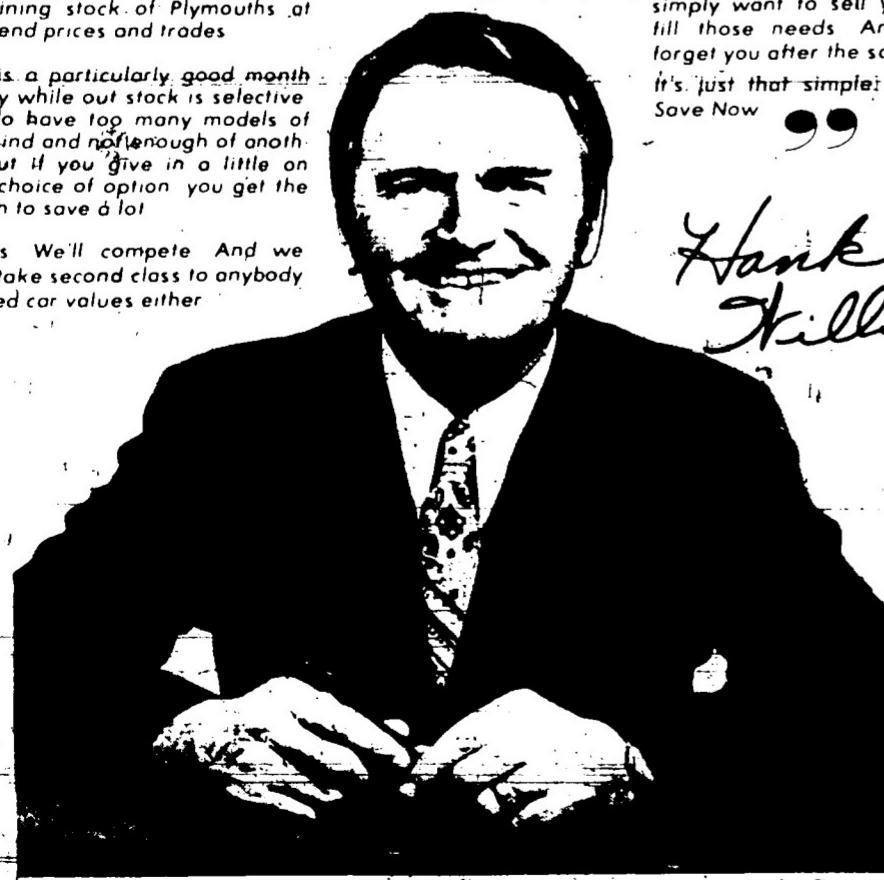

This is a particularly good month to buy while our stock is selective. We do have too many models of one kind and not enough of another, but if you give in a little on your choice of option you get the option to save a lot!

Try us. We'll compete. And we don't take second class to anybody on used car values either.

Whatever your car needs, we simply want to sell you a car to fill those needs. And we don't forget you after the sale.

It's just that simple! Try us, and Save Now.

Valley Comment

What do you think of bralessness?

Sonny Slcock, Twin Falls:
"I think it would be more relaxing, more comfortable not to wear one, especially in the summer when it gets a little hot. If a woman wants to wear one, that's her wish. I don't think she should be put down for not wearing one. In my own opinion I think women look better without them. Chicks that don't wear bras seem to be easier to get along with. It means they don't care what people think. They're more carefree."

Debbie Wageman, Twin Falls:
"I don't think it's right. A lot of these blouses that come out on these girls — it shows everything on them. I've got a cousin who does it and, it's not right. It's all right for them maybe, but it's not all right for me. To me they just don't seem to care what shows on them. It's a matter of morality or something."

Jerry Aldridge, Kentucky (now TF):
"Oh, wow. Well, it looks pretty good on some girls; on some others it doesn't. It depends upon what they wear with it. I like it (bralessness) with low cut dresses, blouses and sweaters. It all depends on where you're at. I wouldn't want my wife to not wear one eating out, but on the beach — that would be all right."

Sue Nelson, Twin Falls:
"I don't like it. Last summer I made myself a halter top and I just wore it around the house. I wasn't comfortable without a bar."

"Around the house, yeah, but I don't think it's good for around town."

Charlotte Glinskij, Massachusetts:
"It didn't make any difference to me before I came from Massachusetts and everybody didn't wear bras. I went almost a year without one. Now I'm using one because I'm pregnant."

Susan Peacock, Twin Falls:
"I think it's okay according to what's being worn and the person's figure. Some people go to extremes both ways. Sometimes it looks ridiculous when women wear super lacey blouses that you can see through. If they go that far they might as well go without a top. Women that are super top heavy should do something other than go braless. There is a point where that's all you see. Women should be somewhat conservative. They should leave something to the imagination."

All-Woman Special Planned

"The Shape of Things," the first comedy special ever produced by, with and about women, will be broadcast Friday evening Sept. 23, on the CBS Television Network.

Carolyn Raskin, whose production credits include "Laugh-In," for which she received two Emmy Awards, will produce the unique satiric revue, which will focus on some of the humorous aspects of the feminine mystique, with the fair sex calling the shots in the creative areas as well as in many of the production and performing categories.

The George Schlatter Production, with Emmy Award-winning Schlatter as executive producer, will take a comical look at the changing role of women in our society, as seen through feminine eyes, and will reflect varying degrees of liberation.

In addition to her acclaimed work on "Laugh-In," Miss Raskin has produced such shows as the "American Film Institute's Salute to John Ford," the recent "Up With People" special, "The Wacky

Even Immortality Doesn't Last Forever

By IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK (NEA) — How good was Babe Ruth? Example: When Ruth hit 60 homers in 1927, his total represented nearly one-seventh of all homers hit in the entire American League that year. Ruth was such a Colossus that a league-leader today would have to hit about 200 homers to bestride the field as Ruth did.

For decades, Ruth's record of 714 career regular-season home runs appeared untouchable; it was nearly 200 more than the 524 hit by the second-place man, Jimmie Foxx. The National League record was a paltry 511, by Mel Ott.

Ruth could also hit for average and has a .342 career mark. With customary braggadocio he once replied to someone who suggested he might have been able to hit .300: "Hell, I coulda hit .600 easy, if I had gone for them singles. But the people were payin' to see me hit them home runs."

He was also a marvel as a pitcher. He won 23 games in 1916 and 24 in 1917. He compiled a 94-46 record over four years, with a 2.28 earned run average. He was 3-0 with an 0.87 ERA in World Series play. His World Series record of 29 and two-thirds scoreless innings pitched stood for 40 years. Eight times he pitched head-to-head against Walter Johnson, one of the all-time great pitchers, and Ruth won six, three by 1-0.

Ruth told people that his greatest thrill in baseball was when, in a key ninth-inning situation, he struck out the feared Tigers' threesome: Bobby Veach, Sam Crawford and Ty Cobb.

Cobb, in fact, always had trouble hitting Ruth. And when Ruth became a hitter to rival—or surpass—Cobb, it was easy to see why the frenetically competitive Cobb would enjoy getting Ruth's eminently easy goat. Cobb would jibe Ruth that he looked like a beer-barrel on two stars. Ruth grew enraged.

Rube Bressler, a fine outfielder of those days, recalls Ruth: "He went on the ball field like he was playing in a cow pasture, and before cows. He was never nervous. He played by instinct, sheer instinct. He wasn't smart, he didn't have any education, but he never made a wrong move on the baseball field."

"He became a great judge of a fly ball, never threw to the wrong base when he was playing the outfield, terrific arm, good base runner, could hit the ball twice as far as any other human being. He was like a damn animal! He had that instinct. They know when it's going to rain, things like that. Nature, that was Ruth!"

It was his hitting, though, that in the end created and perpetuated the epic hero Ruth, a man who became wordly famous. One legendary story concerns Japanese troops during World War II. They shouted to American soldiers what they considered the supreme insult: "To hell with Babe Ruth." Some eight years after Ruth had retired, Even today, ask a young British taxi driver which American athletes he is familiar with and he'll start with "Babe Ruth." And maybe end there, too.

All because Ruth could propel a spheroid great distances by flailing a piece of lumber. But how he did it!

In "Baseball: The Golden Age," historian Harold Seymour describes the magic:

"In a closed stance he gripped a heavy (42-ounce) bat at the end of the handle and moved it back and forth slowly and easily, the way a cat lashes its tail, as he peered over his shoulder awaiting the pitch.

"He swung the bat from his shoestrings, quick and rhythmic, with a little upward arc. When he hit one over the fence he jogged around the bases with little inancing steps, his arms bent, elbows close to the body, and tipped his cap as he crossed home plate.

"He was awesome even in failure. The crowd shuddered and buzzed: What if he had connected?"

Ruth said he copied his swing after Shoeless Joe Jackson's.

"This was the perfectest," Ruth once told Grantland Rice. At bat, he once told a Sport Magazine writer: "I don't try to outguess the pitcher. I think about the pork chops I had the night before and if there should be more salt in the barbecue sauce... Or if I look good in a tux... But the second the pitcher rears back, everything goes out of mind but the ball..."

His wayward ways off the field and wondrous ways on the field amazed even Cobb. Cobb wrote: "I've never seen such an appetite. Ruth would start shoveling down the viands in the morning and never stop. I've seen him at midnight, propped up in bed, order six huge club sandwiches and put them away along with a platter of pigs knuckles and a pitcher of beer. And all the time he'd be smoking a big black cigar. Next day he'd hit two or three home runs and trot around the bases, complaining all the way of gas pains and a bellyache."

In 1925 Ruth almost died. The public story circulated around the world was that he had a stomach-ache after having eaten 12 hot dogs and drunk 12 bottles of soda pop. Others, though, said it was from a Gargantuan drunk. While some whispered he had been struck by a social disease.

Ruth's unbridled appetites were matched by his cavalier misbehavior, which included run-ins with Commissioner Judge Landis and Yankee owners and managers. He also had fist fights with opponents as well as teammates.

His ambition was to manage a big-league team. He never did. Owners asked: "How could he manage a team if he couldn't manage himself?" He became an embittered man, believing baseball had forsaken him and died of throat cancer in 1948 at the relatively young age of 53.

In the end, this wildly improbable and beloved public figure was a mere mortal. As mortal as the man who will break Ruth's career home run record, Henry Aaron. As mortal as the man who held that record before Ruth, someone named Cactus Cravath.

NBC NEWS correspondent Tom Pettit (right) interviews Harold B. Lee, president of the Mormon Church, for a segment of "First Tuesday" which will air September 4 in the evening. It will examine the church in terms of social welfare programs, its theology and its economic holdings as well as its controversial racial policies.

Jacques Cousteau Undersea World Has Four Shows

The ABC News action-adventure series, "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," will present four new episodes linked by the common theme of man versus the rugged Antarctic during the 1973-74 season on the ABC Television Network.

From December 1972 until March 1973, Capt. Jacques-Yves Cousteau, in a cooperative venture with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, struggled to unlock many of the secrets of the coldest, windiest, highest, least explored and least polluted continent on earth — Antarctica.

The four hour-long color television specials to air during 1973-74 chronicle Cousteau's scientific expedition, with its triumphs — and its tragedies.

"We are delighted to welcome 'The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau' back for a seventh season on ABC," said ABC New Senior Vice President William Sheehan.

The four hours of new programming scheduled for 1973-74 represent one of the most ambitious undertakings of this kind in television history — the true-life drama of dedicated men risking their lives to fathom the awesome, austere, overpowering, killing Antarctic."

Titles of the four new programs which will air during the coming season are: "South to Fire and Ice," "The Flight of the Penguins," "Beneath the Bottom of the World" and "Blizzard at Hope Bay."

The first of the new programs, "South to Fire and Ice," details one of the early adventures of the research vessel Calypso's long and trying voyage — a stop at the sub-Antarctic stepping stones of Britain's South Shetland Islands, with their incongruous combination of giant glaciers and active volcanoes. It is on this leg of the journey that tragedy first strikes the marine adventurers. On Deception Island, First Mate Michel Laval loses his life in a freak accident.

Mourning their lost comrade, the expedition sets off to its next port of call, an abandoned

British scientific station at Whaler's Bay. There, they establish camp and begin to film the program, "The Flight of the Penguins."

The scientists join the penguins in their dives and explore their underwater habitats in an attempt to go far beyond what has been done before in studies of these basically aquatic creatures.

The third new program in the series, "Beneath the Bottom of the World," focuses on the denizens of the strange, half-lit world under the Antarctic ice. Shrimp-like krill, ice fish and brittle stars are only a few of the undersea curiosities examined in detail. In addition, Calypso crewmen take to helicopter and hot-air balloon for aerial studies of the region's ecology.

The long and severe Antarctic winter is approaching as the Cousteau crewmen hurry to complete their quest. And disaster nearly strikes, as recorded on the fourth new offering, "Blizzard at Hope Bay."

In late January, by the sheerest chance, the paths of Calypso and a small drifting boat cross, and Capt. Cousteau rescues Dr. David Lewis, a lone circumpolar navigator who had capsized two months earlier.

By BUCK BIGGERS
& CHET STOVER

We interrupt for this important message — a game of question and answer from the Mail Box. Bet you can't get ten right! Just answer yes or no.

1. Maude looks tough as nails to me. Is she really afraid of flying?

2. Does Lorne Greene find detective work ("Griff") easy after doing a western all these years?

3. I am after the name of the woman who ghosted the book for man-woman Christine Jorgenson. Is it true she's in a soap opera?

4. How could Vicki Lawrence have a song hit without experience? Wasn't the "Carol Burnett Show" her first taste of show business?

5. Wasn't Rock Hudson, big buddy of dog-lover Doris Day, cited by the law about his dogs?

6. Isn't it true that twice now — within a few months — Burt Reynolds has had to halt film productions because of physical incapacity?

7. During her trip to Peking, did Shirley MacLane find Chinese women more "liberated" than those in America?

8. I keep hoping Engelbert Humperdinck will get a chance at another TV series. Has his nightclub act improved?

9. What is this bit of living with men? Doesn't Liza Minnelli think marriage is important?

10. Why did Kay Gable sell the estate Clark loved so much. Was it suggested by her new love interest?

11. Wasn't it a disagreement about the type of material Lawrence Welk allowed her to play which caused pianist Joanne Castle to leave the show?

12. If I heard right, a guest on the "Tonight" show called 1973-74 the "old man's season." True?

13. I never read anything about Ruth Roman in the gossip columns. Has she retired from the screen?

14. Has Karl Malden found a TV series much tougher work than movies?

15. Didn't Cher run to San Francisco because she caught Sonny in a Las Vegas lie?

Okay, let's check your Box Score.

1. Yes. No matter how tough she looks as "Maude" — Bea Arthur admits "I'm absolutely terrified of flying — have to take sedatives just to flap my arms."

2. NO. Says Lorne Greene, "Westerns are easy. You get on a horse and it takes you there. In

"Griff", I climb buildings, hop onto ships, leap out of cars and nearly get run over."

3. YES. Lois Kibbee who plays Emily Moore on "Somerset" is the author who ghosted Christine Jorgenson's book about herself.

4. NO. Before she came to the "Carol Burnett Show", Vicki Lawrence was a member of "The Young Americans". She not only sings, but plays eight instruments.

5. YES. But the citation Rock Hudson received was only for having 3 dogs without a kennel license. "It's ridiculous," says Rock. "I have plenty of land, and the dogs don't bother a soul."

6. YES. Burt Reynolds had to interrupt "Cat Deneing" for a hernia operation, then he went back to work too quickly and had to interrupt one of his NBC Specials to recuperate.

7. YES. Says Shirley MacLane, "In China, the goal of sexual equality is shared by men and women alike."

8. YES. Engelbert Humperdinck has warmed up his act with jokes and talk.

9. NO. Liza Minnelli is not too big on marriage; feels her mother was cowed by it. "She felt she had to marry every man she fell in love with," says Liza. "She was too moral."

10. NO. The suggestion to sell Clark Gable's estate came to Kay Gable from the family lawyer. Taxes were too high.

11. NO. Joanne Castle left the Welk show "to try my wings and see if I could fly without the marvelous support he gives to everyone."

12. YES. 1973-74 has been dubbed the "old man's season" because of the many over 40 actors with new series — Jimmy Stewart, Lorne Greene, Telly Savalas, James Coco.

13. NO. You don't read much about Ruth Roman, because, says she, "I'm a solitary person — almost a hermit. I have no interest in Hollywood parties, and that's where the gossip collectors collect."

14. YES. Says Karl Malden, "Doing a TV series, you work twelve hours a day until you are ready to drop. Compared to that, movies are a cinch."

15. NO. Sonny and Cher had a normal-type family argument, and Cher went off shopping. Says Cher, "Sonny, never lies to me. Arguments or not, what he says is always the truth."

The dictionary says a collection is an assemblage or accumulation. This definition would make collectors of us all for most homes are an accumulation of things.

Actually, there is much more to collecting than just accumulating. The kind of collections discussed in this column are those which provide the owner with a great deal of pleasure and pride and reflect a genuine and personal interest in collecting.

There are as many differing opinions as to what is worth collecting as there are collectors. My intent in this column is not to discredit any genuine interest but rather to help collectors by providing information, and from time to time to introduce you to outstanding collections.

Many collectibles are things you can remember from childhood or they are collectible items as new as today.

The collecting mania has grown so fantastically within the past decade or two that there really is a shortage of fine and rare antiques. With this shortage and ever increasing prices the collecting public has turned to other collectibles. The result is that almost anything has become fair game for collectors. And collectors are fair game for almost anyone with something to sell.

How do you find your way through this maze of collectors and collectibles? For a start set some sound objectives for your hobby. Decide what you want your collection to do for

Former Cop Is On The Rookies

Security patrol officer Al Harris, a former policeman and close friend of Lt. Ryker, is suspected of burglarizing homes in the neighborhood he is paid to protect in "Life Robbery" on the ABC Television Network's "The Rookies" Monday, August 20 (8-9 PM, PDT). (Repeat; OAD 2-26-73)

After an unusual number of burglaries occur in his district, Al Harris asks Lt. Ryker to assign police officers to temporarily help patrol the upper-middle class area. Rookies Terry, Willie and Mike begin to suspect Harris himself when it becomes obvious that he is the one person who knows when residents will be gone and he has keys to many of the homes. Suspicion of Harris is actually part of a plan instigated by Fred Cox, an engineer embittered because of financial reverses.

George Stanford Brown stars as Terry Webster.

you to help in meeting people, decorating your home or reflect your personal interests. Endow your collection with intrinsic values such as thoughtful judgment, study and knowledge and a willingness to share with others.

There has been a great deal of discussion about the investment value of antiques and collectibles. If you plan to use your collection as an investment then treat it as it you were investing in stocks and bonds. Listen to the advice of experienced and reliable counselors. Don't buy for a quick profit. Buy quality at a good price. Avoid fads and trends in collecting. And, unless you really know what you are doing, don't buy a "bargain."

Whether you purchase for an investment or for your own pleasure, be sure you are buying what you like and can live with.

Remember, a really fine collection must have more than just a monetary value. What you invest of yourself, of your knowledge, time and skill is equally important to your long-term satisfaction.

Dinah's Place Gets In Depth Study As To Why-Where

Two questions: First, why does a network keep a series on the air when it costs more than the competition and yet delivers a smaller audience? Second, why does a man of 38 years fall hard for a gal of 32?

As different as these questions may seem, they are directly related. And the best way to answer them is to watch "Dinah's Place," a half-hour show on NBC any morning Monday through Friday. Meanwhile, follow along with us for a look at the show in 3D (Difference, Depth and Durability).

1. Difference: The NBC data sheet for this program labels it a "Women's Magazine Of The Air," not a bad description. In the course of four or five weeks, the show's entertainment and service features compare very favorably with those of a monthly magazine.

And while there are other shows which offer a fair serving of beauty, decorating, cooking, etc., they do not have Dinah Shore. It is her poise and experience which lend the show its essential flow of believability, and it is her contacts which lend it the star luster outside of prime-time or Johnny Carson's show could you bump into Carol Burnett, Hal Holbrook, Valerie Harper, Dom DeLuise or Gloria Steinem? Well, you could see them all in a week at "Dinah's Place."

2. Depth: By depth we mean talent, and let's look first at the technical side. Producer Fred Tatshure and director Glen Swanson both deserve applause for making the shows appear so artfully unrehearsed. And Anita Shaw gets chief credit for the excellent selection of ideas and material.

But how meaningless all this would be in the hands of someone other than this hostess with the mostest. A sad example is the syndicated series starring Joyce Brothers.

Although an obvious copy of Dinah's program, it never measures up to the original. Why not?

Dinah Shore possesses a remarkable talent. It is a talent for being interested; an ability to care — or, at the very least, to make guests and viewers believe she cares. Believe that each word Dinah hears is a word really listened to. In short, she has a talent for bringing vitality to life. And this is why every episode of "Dinah's Place" leaves one feeling a bit more alive than before.

3. Durability: In 1970 and 1971, pitted against reruns of "I Love Lucy," "Dinah's Place" seldom equalled the Lucy ratings. Now, facing a CBS game show, "Joker's Wild," Dinah continues to come in second. Since her show is more expensive than reruns or a game show, why does NBC stick with it?

First, there is the publicity and prestige. "Dinah's Place" may not be the highest-rated morning show, but it is certainly the most pretentious, and the ratings are "satisfactory."

Second, because of this series, NBC gets Dinah's Specials — like last season's "How To Handle a Woman." In a field of some 200 specials (from all three networks last season), "How To Handle A Woman" ranked an impressive No. 21, allowing Dinah to outstrip (if you will excuse the expression) such special ladies as Ann-Margret, Mario Thomas and Mitzi Gaynor.

Who Do We Blame For Rock Creek? Will Snake River Rim End That Way?

By O. A. (Gus) KELKER
Editor, Times-News

The showplace homes of Twin Falls should be on the rim overlooking Rock Creek. Somewhere along the line someone missed the boat in developing the waterway's cut through the city.

Now, with all the talk about a "green belt" along both sides of Snake River canyon for a distance of which nobody is sure of, the realization is brought to the forefront that it's too late along Rock Creek and it's too late on the Snake River rim.

I suppose the pioneers can be blamed for the Rock Creek situation. Back in 1904 when they first came to open the town, the salmon could be caught the entire length of the stream where it now flows within the city limits. And far above and below that.

But then the pioneers had their hands full — of mud and dust and sagebrush grubbing and deep ruts and poorly built initial homes and even tents. We really shouldn't blame them for not noticing the possibility of Rock Creek. They were out here all alone and wanted to group together, rather than spread out.

Yet, if Rock Creek flowed through practically any California community, for instance, it would be lined with fine homes, the canyon sides would be landscaped and perhaps even the stream would be blue again instead of a dirty, dirty light brown. So dirty that no self-respecting fish would live in it and no one in their right mind would eat a fish coming from the city-limit waters.

Perhaps it could be done — this stately home living along Rock Creek rim — but we doubt it. Perhaps a patch of homes here and there but there is hardly any chance left for a long line of homes from the east to the west city limits and beyond.

And what about the Snake River rim? A few nice homes there right now but it is too late. To buy up all the property would cost a fortune and to make a "green belt" of it would be next to impossible.

Who could justify unused, high-priced "green" when money is needed for schools, for rebuilding the American Falls Dam and for bringing Magic Valley Memorial Hospital up to the level it should be.

So, like the early pioneer, the "modern day" pioneer seems to have missed the boat — or come up with the idea after it was too late.

But in the background are the rumblings of a project which was thought up — and actually started — just over 30 years ago. A "scenic" road running between Shoshone Falls and Thousand Springs with viewpoints at every place worth viewing.

When this dream first saw the light of day it was just a case of coming before its time. People were not quite ready for something like that.

But today, with all the ecology and what have you, the thoughts are different. Result — a project like a scenic road might just work and it would be a lot less costly and with more opportunity of success than a "green belt."

Some of the fellows who sparked that first road project are still around and they just might stir things up again.

Meanwhile, take a look at the Rock Creek rim and it will give you an idea of what can happen to a beauty spot — if you end up without homes and without a rim road.

Young Americans Find Drug Rap Overwhelming

By JUAN DE ONIS,
New York Times Service

ANTIOCH, Turkey — There were tears and curses from the seven young Americans in the prisoner's dock as a Turkish judge set heavy bail in a trial for drug smuggling that began eight months ago.

You think Americans are made of money!" shouted Joan McDaniel, weeping at the prospect of going back to the stifling little jail where she has been held since December 10.

Miss McDaniel and five other American girls were arrested along with Robert Ernest Hubbard, who has admitted in court that he tried to smuggle 225 pounds of hashish into Turkey.

The Trial of The Seven has made them minor celebrities in Turkey and a headache for the nearest American consulate, at Adana, which looks after their welfare and legal defense.

All are in their twenties and most are or have been college students. They come from what could be called typical middle-class American homes. All but one admits using drugs; they see nothing unusual in that.

Like thousands of other young Americans, they came to Europe to travel and get together with the others, who gather from Amsterdam to Athens and drift through the Middle East and on to India, Afghanistan — wherever the road leads them. Theirs led here.

Any visitor to an American consulate in Turkey is given a small leaflet that says:

"Americans Enjoy beautiful Turkey but — don't use drugs. Police are alert and penalties are stiff."

"A puff of has can get you two and one half years. Possession of even a gram three to five years. Importing or exporting any illicit drug 10 to 30 years."

"Organized efforts to smuggle drugs or persuading others to smuggle, life."

"Don't spoil your tour by a trip to jail. Avoid narcotics."

Hubbard, a 22-year-old who has a droopy mustache and wears a soft leather jacket to court, faces at least 10 years in prison if he is convicted. He said that it was in West Germany that he began the trip that ended on December 10 at a customs post on the Turkish border with Syria.

In Munich, he said, he rented three Volkswagen minibuses in an agreement with an American he identified as William Schaeffer, with he said, paid for the rentals.

Hubbard said he invited Miss McDaniel and Catherine Zenz, a registered nurse from Lancaster, Wis., to drive two of the buses to Lebanon, while he drove the third.

Hubbard said that Schaeffer "Financed the deal," with the intention of bringing hashish back from Lebanon.

In Beirut, they were joined by four more young women — Margaret Engel, and Paula Gibson, both college students from Fairfax, Va.; Penelope Czarnecki, who said she was a drama student; and Maria Terese Crooki, of Worcester, Mass., who said she was a student taking a trip to Europe and the Middle East.

The seven drove in the three vans from Beirut to Turkey, crossing Syria. At the customs checkpoint, near here, the vehicles were searched, and 105 bricks of hashish, wrapped in plastic, were found in the cars' roof upholstery.

The four young women who joined in the group in Beirut say that they did not know about the hashish. Hubbard absolved all the young women in a statement to the court.

On a motion from the defense lawyer, Kayyum Men-zileoglu, the court set bail yesterday for the four girls who joined the party in Beirut. The amount — $3,571 each — was extremely high for such cases.

With the help of Louis P. Russell, an American Consular official who has seen to the group's personal needs, telegrams were sent to parents and friends in the United States.

Pending replies, the young women were taken back to the jail, where they share a big, barred room with 20 other women prisoners. Over the last eight months, their fellow prisoners have included prostitutes, gypsy smugglers and a woman charged with murder.

"It has been an experience we will not forget," said Miss Engel, who has kept a diary and says she hopes to write a book. "At first it seemed impossible we could live there. The food was just grease soup and we were sleeping two and three to a bunk with bedbugs and rats running around."

Rural Aged Face Special Problems

By TOM TIEDE

OAK CREEK, Colo. (NEA) — When Esther Lewis was younger, settling down from a brief career in vaudeville, she thought the Colorado Rockies would be an ideal place to live out her life.

Now that she's old, however, has a bum leg, has cramps in the arm and needs help she can't get, the mountains are not so lovely as they are looming. "Stuck away like this," she says, "why, I suppose I could die and not be found for days."

Mrs. Lewis is 72. She lives at the end of a barracks-like row of weathered apartments in this community of 500 people. Her husband died years ago. Most of her friends are gone. Her neighbors give little indication they know she exists. She is lonely, isolated, ignored and, most of all, vulnerable.

"Once I had to go into Denver to get a brace for my leg. There is no train so I made it down to the highway to catch the bus. It's 150 miles to Denver and with my leg and all it was very uncomfortable. Then when I got there I had to carry my own bag. I asked a policeman for help and he turned away. My cabdriver said he didn't like picking up handicapped people. Oh, it was an awful trip. But I haven't any choice, living out here."

Mrs. Lewis is not unlike hundreds of thousands of other rural elderly. Not many of them have any choice. Only one or two per cent of Americans move when they reach retirement age; thus, not able to seek out anything better, they must rely on their communities for old-age assistance. And in many instances, in rural America, there isn't any assistance.

Growing old anywhere has its problems. But growing old in rural America can be severely difficult. Oak Creek is a good example. One of four communities which make up a region known as South Routt County, it has neither the time nor money to help its aged. Once a mining center, Oak Creek almost folded (in the 1950s) when its coal industry did. It hung on, to some extent, because many of the older citizens had nowhere else to go.

Says Margaret Rossi, wife of a local rancher: "The usual things happened here: The tax base fell away. Young people started moving out. Existing "Actually, what I did was to try to get everybody interested in helping the old people. We didn't have any community money to begin grand schemes, but we had people. I figured if all the people got together, young and old, we could do a lot for one another."

A nice thought. Unfortunately, it was not shared by the majority. Mrs. Rossi found some numbing cases of helpless old people — "I insisted on taking one lady to the hospital and she passed blood clots right in my car, and then she just went unconscious" — but she could find little public support.

"People just couldn't care less. I don't know why that is. I guess it's just inborn in them that out here everybody has to fend for themselves. People in the mountains hate charity, you know, and any time you try to help them they think it's charity. Even the old people feel this way."

Mrs. Rossi says most old people subscribe to a stark code: They go over the hill quietly, never complaining, never requesting. "Even when I was able to help someone, they always insisted on reciprocating. They'd give me something for the favor. That's the way they are."

Fortunately for this sense of rugged individualism, as well as minimizing suffering among the old, things have begun to pick up economically in South Routt. Money being spent for the development of nearby Steamboat Springs (a skiing area) is creating area-wide jobs. Young people are once again coming in. Oak Creek has been promised a new ambulance. A full-time doctor is expected to occupy the local clinic. In addition, Margaret Rossi's pleas for mercy have sunk in a little;

"The game warden no longer

throws the confiscated meat away. He gives it to me and I in turn pass it on, very discreetly, to the old folks."

Still, the elderly here, as in many other parts of rural America, are shamefully neglected. Esther Lewis for one. Even revitalized, Oak Creek continues to forget the lady's alive.

"The worst thing," she says, "is I can't leave my apartment. There's no one to take me. I used to try to get around by myself, in the summer, but now I can't even do that. There are all kinds of dogs outside my door. I'm afraid one would knock me down."

She sighs, then points to her rigidly braced leg. And though she does not say it, Esther Lewis must sometimes wonder, in this careless world: If she was knocked down would any of her otherwise occupied neighbors bother to pick her up?

Soul And Blues Awards Is No Prize Winner

By DICK KLEINER,

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Some locals got together and decided that the Grammy Awards don't do justice to black performers. So they staged what they called The Soul and Blues Awards to fill the gap.

Like most new awards shows this one suffered from too many categories and not enough preparation. They had some great performers but the categories for awards were endless. The actual show was a shambles. Often nobody came up to accept the awards for winners who weren't there.

Top winners were Al Green, male vocalist of the year, and Roberta Flack, female vocalist of the year.

At a taping of NBC Follies, one of the fall season's new shows, Mickey Rooney talked to the studio audience before the show.

Moore says the house was full of poltergeists.

"I would draw a hot bath," he says, "and then stick my toe in the tub and it would be ice cold. Lights would be turned off and on when nobody was near the switch. Dishes would float around the room under their own power.

There'll probably be a sequel to "The Poseidon Adventure," but Gene Hackman won't be in it. He was killed at the end of the picture but that doesn't necessarily have to be permanent. Lots of sequels have been made involving characters who were killed off in the original.

In fact, Hackman says, producer Irwin Allen had the whole thing figured out. At the end of the first one, a rescue helicopter came along to scoop up the survivors of the capsized ocean liner.

Hackman says Allen proposed that the sequel open with the helicopter pilot (this

Cardboard Schedule Comes In Handy

By NORMAN MARK
(c) Chicago Daily News

As a reminder of how transient commercial network television can be, I keep a cardboard schedule of the 1969-1970 ABC, CBS and NBC primetime schedule handy.

Mind you, September, 1969, was only four years ago. President Nixon was President. General Motors was still making cars. Mt. Rushmore hasn't changed since then.

But the face of network television is almost totally different.

Not counting movies, there were 73 regular scheduled, primetime network programs then, but only 16 of TV will still be seen in September, 1973. That's a mortality rate of 78 per cent in four years.

What that kind of failure rate, if the TV networks were airlines, they'd be grounded. They probably wouldn't even be allowed to taxi on the ground and might be declared a hangar hazard.

The survivors include nine dramatic shows (Gunsmoke, Marcus Welby, Medical Center, Hawaii Five-O, Ironside, Mannix, Walt Disney, The FBI and Adam-12); only six comedy or variety programs (Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Room 222, Dean Martin, The Brady Bunch and Love, American Style), and one news show, 60 Minutes. Five of the nine dramatic programs that have survived four years or more are detective shows (Hawaii Five-O, Ironside, Mannix, FBI and Adam-12).

I guess if you're carrying a gun in netowrk TV land, you're safer than the people with laugh machines.

Two of the drama survivors are medical shows (Marcus Welby and Medical Center). Therefore, the ultimate TV show would be about a doctor who solves homicides or a cop who shoots and patches his victims.

The list of cancellations is long and sometimes quite sad. I miss the gentle My World and Welcome To It, the almost-nodialog in then Came Bronson, the sappy sweetness of the Kraft Music Hall, the understanding in the Courtship of Eddie's Father, the always funny Jackie Gleason Show, the low-key Andy Williams effort and the outrageous Smothers Brothers.

There are also many programs I'd prefer to forget. Bracken's World was about a never-seen head of a Hollywood studio. When the ratings went down, we finally saw him. It didn't help.

The Survivors was about rich people played by George Hamilton and Lana Turner, two of the silver screen's most unmentionable actors. The show barely survived the first week.

The Corning Counterange™ electric range is fantastic—but oh so practical! There isn't a burner in sight because the heating units are hidden underneath. You cook with precise thermostatically controlled heat on a beautifully smooth surface, in specially designed Cookmate™ cookware. For the first time you have a perfectly matched system that takes the guess-work out of cooking and even helps make you a better cook.

This range is available in a regular free-standing model with pyrolytic self-cleaning oven and a slip-in model (also with self-cleaning oven) that gives your kitchen that distinctive built-in look.

$499

Sure, the all new Corning range still costs more than a conventional range—but it's more than just a conventional range—it's a total cooking system. Look at what you get!

MIX & MATCH

A new look for your kitchen.

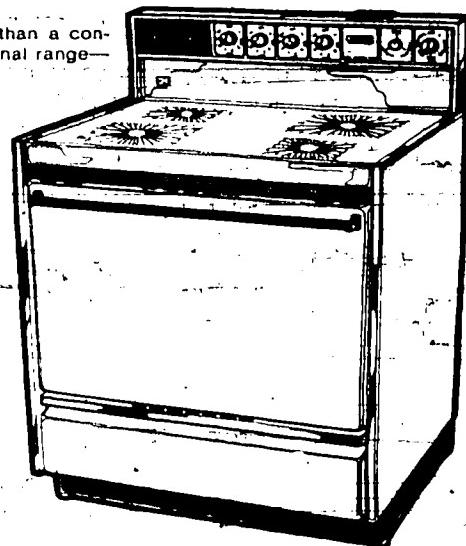

Corning's unique appliances are so revolutionary, so beautiful they can give your kitchen a completely new look.

The Corning™ wall oven. Perfect companion to The Counter That Cooks cooktop because it complements it in looks and efficiency. The top oven is pyrolytic self-cleaning with a conventional baking oven below. It even has a rotisserie and a meat probe for perfect roasting. Also available in single self-cleaning model.

The Counter That Cooks™ cooktop by Corning. The remarkable cooktop that you can build right into your counter. It offers all the outstanding features of the rangetop beauty, total cleanability and complete thermostatic control. Available with two or four heating units.
